NEW ZEALAND FEELS EFFECTS OF STRIKE

Privations Among Poorer People Follow Prolonged Labor Troubles.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Wellington, New Zealand, Oct. 31.—A shortage of food and fuel with its accompanying privations for the poorer classes is commencing to be felt throughout New Zealand as a result of a general strike of coal miners and dockers.

Work has ceased in most trades in every portion of New Zealand. In Wellington and Auckland, the two principal cities, continued rioting has brought about the landing of blue jackets from British warships to assist in preserving order. The blue jackets are assigned primarily to protect the men engaged in loading fruit on vessels at the docks and to see that passengers are allowed to embark or land from steamers without molestation.

The struggle which has led to this serious state of affairs is a trial of strength between the employers and the federation of labor. The latter organization is not registered under the provisions of the compulsory arbitration act passed in 1902 by the government, which gives the employer the right to strike or to employ workmen to strike or any employers ordering a lockout without first going to arbitration are liable to severe penalties.

labor upheaval began with a strike of shipwrights several weeks ago. The men demanded higher wages, improved working conditions, and recognition of their union. The employers and miners shortly afterward laid down their tools in sympathy and other trades followed their example until a large proportion of the organized labor of the dominion has ceased work.

NORTHERN PACIFIC CHARTER ASSAILED

Attorney General Walter C. Owen Argues for Legal Proceedings to Annul Railway's Charter.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 31.—Attorney General Walter C. Owen appeared in the supreme court this afternoon to argue in favor of legal proceedings against the Northern Pacific railroad company to annul its charter for failure to pay the secretary of state $250,000 for increasing its capital stock. The application was opposed by Attorney George D. Van Dyke, who claimed that the road was incorporated under a special charter not amenable to the provisions of the general charter law.

Mr. Owen's application is for leave to bring suit in the nature of quo warranto seeking to annul the charter. In the last fifteen years the railroad has increased its capital stock $250,000,000, without paying a fee to the secretary of state for filing the same.

"Any increase in capital would be a change in the corporation itself of a fundamental character," said Mr. Owen. "Where would the public, or a prospective investor, get some of the increased stock? It is not reasonable to presume that the legislature intended that any action taken by the stockholders increasing the stock should be evidenced by some paper filed in the office of the secretary of state? We maintain that any change in the charter is equivalent to an amendment of the articles of association."

The attorney general contends that the remedy sought is not harsh in view of the circumstances. He says that the reason for holding such failure a ground for forfeiture is much stronger in the case of such important and fundamental changes in the charter itself as are involved here than in the case of mere failure to file reports.

The other part of Attorney Van Dyke's argument was devoted to an explanation of the early history of the company in securing a special charter. He contended that such he the case the provisions of the general charter law, later enacted, requiring a fee of $1 per $1,000 for filing articles of incorporation with the secretary of state, were not applicable.

He also maintained that the statute of limitations had run against the amount's sought to be collected and that the state was in error in not attempting to collect the fee as soon as the change was made.

EXPORT TOBACCO IS MOSTLY FLUE-CURED

Department of Agriculture Bulletin Treats of Curing Methods in Southern Districts.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—The normal normal production of flue-cured tobacco on a farm-weight basis is estimated to be about 25,000,000 pounds, according to Bulletin No. 18 of the Department of Agriculture. This type of tobacco is the only American grown variety that has shown a tendency to expand our exports. About 40 per cent, or around 10,000,000 pounds, is exported, the remainder is used in domestic consumption.

Variety of Uses.
"All things considered, this flue-cured type of tobacco is unsurpassed in universal popularity," states the report, "and it is adapted to a variety of uses, including granulated and cut smoking tobacco, both paper and all-tobacco cigarettes, and plug filter and wrapper; in fact, it is adapted to all the regular forms in which tobacco is used except standard cigars and snuff. In color and general appearance it is very attractive, while its low nicotine content, mildness, aromatic sweetness, fragrance, and good keeping qualities render it very satisfying to the user."

The use of the flues in curing tobacco became popular after the close of the Civil War and by the middle of the century the demand had increased so that about 20 counties in Virginia and North Carolina had been planted to this variety. There are a number of varieties of flue-cured tobacco, prominently among them are the Wampee, Yellow Oronoco, White-stem Oronoco, Big Oronoco, Adcock, Adkin, Willow-Leaf, Gooch, Tilley and Hester. The Wampee is the standard wrapper type and perhaps the most popular. The Adcock is a great favorite in the noted wrapper-producing section of Granville county, North Carolina, while the Adkin is popular as an early maturing variety.

Handling of Fields.
Apart from the character of the soil itself, there is no more important matter for the tobacco grower to consider than the management of his fields. Indeed the character of the tobacco produced will depend as much on how the fields have been handled in rotation between the successive tobacco crops as upon the fertilizer used or the cultivation given directly to the tobacco crop itself.

Tobacco land should be so handled as to be kept in good life. A liberal supply of vegetable matter in an advanced stage of decay is highly desirable, but it should be of the kind not excessively rich in ammonia.

It is well known that the organic matter of freshly cleared or broom-sedge fields is of a kind well suited to tobacco. It consists principally of dead leaves, twigs, roots, pine tags, broom-sedge and roots. Such vegetable matter, while poor in ammonia by its ample volume makes the soil very mellow and friable and of good water-holding capacity. There is probably no better humus crop for rotation than the hard-grass or red top.

Disease Injury.
Speaking of "diseasing," as it is generally called, is the most common disease injury to which tobacco in the flue-cured districts is subjected. It is caused by a fungus disease, disseminated by spores. The only practical method of reducing the injury to the crop caused by the disease is by using potash more liberally in the fertilizer, which is known to increase the resistance of the plant to the disease.

GOVERNMENT ARGUES IN DYNAMITE APPEAL

Attorney Miller Shows That Explosives Were Carried on Passenger Trains.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Oct. 31.—In answer to a request of the court that the government show proof that the dynamites convicted in the McNamara plots specifically intended to and did carry explosives on passenger trains. District Attorney C. W. Miller of Indiana today argued before the United States court of appeals that in every instance in which details of a dynamite had been shown the dynamite had been carried on a passenger train.

The record showed at least fifty such instances, he said, and there was no evidence of any explosion, the dynamite for which had been transported in any other manner. The government based its case on seventeen trainloads of nitroglycerine and eight of dynamite, he said, and all these offenses occurred within the year during which the Los Angeles Times building was blown up in October, 1910.

The labor union officials who seek a reversal of their convictions at Indianapolis last December, were convicted only on evidence of their violation of interstate regulation of the shipment of explosives and not on evidence of the destruction of life and property. Mr. Miller told the court.

The argument will end today and the court will take the appeal under advisement.

The Hines suit never came to trial. He charged Funk with slander in not mentioning Hines as saying, "It cost us $100,000 to put Lorimer over."

Patrick J. Enright, former bell boy, told of meeting Stiefel who showed him photographs of Donahoe and later employed him at a day after he lost his hotel position.

You Are As Old As Your Spine

When your spine begins to tighten and grow out of line, whether you are twenty, thirty or sixty, you are beginning to grow old.

When one of the vertebrae of your spinal column is thrown out of position one of the nerves, which feed your body, is pinched and therefore it can not act properly. Every part of your body is affected by your nerves. Just as a garden hose is pinched, stopping the flow of water, when a heavy stone is laid on it, just so are your nerves affected by this pressure of the spine.

Removing this pressure is the work of the Chiropractor. Come in and talk it over. Examination free.

POUR SECOND ARCH OF BRIDGE IN WEEK

Third to Follow Closely—Larger Derrick Soon to Be Moved to Galena, Illinois.

Concrete will be poured into the forms for the second arch of the new Milwaukee street bridge by the latter part of next week, according to the statement of Foreman Shure, made today. This morning the concrete mixer was placed in operation and a start made at pouring concrete for the footings of the center pier although there were still twelve more piles to be driven. These, however, were on the opposite end of the pier. To build up the pier to the spring line once the footings are in, will be but two or three days' work and the forms for the arch can then be completed.

As soon as the derrick over the river finishes work on the pier it will be moved to the east bank, and the derrick which now occupies that position will be dismantled and with its crew sent to Galena, Illinois, where the Gould Construction company is building a new bridge over the Galena river for the Illinois Central railway. The night crew will also be taken off very soon.

The working crew is being gradually reduced and those who wish to continue in the employ of the company are being sent to Iowa where the company is doing railway construction work about ninety miles west of Clinton. Only on the three or four days when the remaining arches and abutments are poured will large crews be required.

As many as 105 men have been on the company's pay roll, the average number employed ranging from 65 to 75 men. The daily pay roll has run from $150 to $225 per day. Bad digging has made the excavation for the east abutment proceed slowly. An intermixture of stone, sand, mud, and timbers has been encountered. The most serious obstacle was the grilling of the old pier which extends back into the bank beyond the limits of the old pier. The city was arranged with the company whereby it will restore the foundation wall of the Putnam building which is at present in a very precarious condition. The owners of the building were anxious to have the Gould company do the work, believing they had the best facilities for doing it.

No Whips Allowed in Moscow.

Among the curious things that arrest the traveler's attention on arriving in Moscow is the fact that drivers of cabs, carriages and all sorts of vehicles do not carry whips. There is a law prohibiting their use. The excellent condition of their horses attests the benefit of this humane law. Nowhere are there sleeker and better groomed horses than those used in the carriages of Moscow.

BELOIT MURDER CASE IS GIVEN TO JURY

Arguments Closed at Noon and Jury Retired at 2:30 O'clock This Afternoon.

Arguments in the case of the State versus Joseph Ferruccio, charged with the murder of Alessandro Polachi and a murderous assault upon Tony Pergona, were closed at noon today. Judge Grimm delivered his charge to the jury at two o'clock this afternoon and the jury retired to frame its verdict at 2:30 o'clock. The closing argument for the prosecution was delivered by Attorney T. D. Woolsey of Beloit, and that of the defense by Attorney R. S. Nolan. Not more than three and a half hours were devoted to the arguments in the case. They were opened yesterday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock by District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie on behalf of the state and C. D. Rosa for the defendant.

Judge Grimm told the jury his charge to the jurors to explain to them the circumstances under which they should find the accused guilty or innocent of the first or second degree of murder, or third degree manslaughter, or if found guilty of manslaughter the defendant must be acquitted of murder or manslaughter. Should they find Ferruccio guilty of murder in the first or second degree they must also find the defendant guilty of manslaughter upon Pergona, but if found guilty of manslaughter the defendant must be acquitted of murder or manslaughter. The defendant admits shooting Polachi and Pergona, but pleads justification.

PAYING TOP PRICES FOR TOBACCO CROP

Tobacco Buyers Have Been Busy Early and Late in Attempt to Clear Up Work in One Week.

Seemingly possessed with the mania that they must make their purchases this week or not at all, tobacco dealers throughout the state have been riding the country early and late in the week for the 1913 crop. The situation which amounted almost to a panic on the part of the buyers brought with it a wave of high prices much to the benefit and satisfaction of the growers. Prices paid during the week will easily average at 12 cents while many acres of the best binder and wrapper grades brought from 13 to 14 cents. The whole situation calls to mind the 1908 season and happy is the buyer who had courage to make early purchases at the lower prices, but these are very few as there was a general agreement to hold off on account of the Paul law. Auent the Paul law and the present situation the Edgerton Reporter has the following to say:

"If it was the Paul law that stood in the way of early buying by the big operators until the crop was in bundle, the query arises, why did the break come now when there is yet danger of heavy frosts and the crop is ripe? All the chances which the buyer assumes under this law have not yet been eliminated for the crop is ripe and in the bundle. Of course, if the tobacco is taken down in too high a case it is a risk which the farmer assumes because it can be easily shown to be his neglect, but about other, the buyer and hurry might overlook at the time of the sale? If the law is any good the agreed price, Everybody will be a little curious to see how matters turn out at the delivery end of the season."

LAY PAVING BRICK UPON HILL STREET

Contractor Will Be Ready to Pour Cement Into Crevices Tomorrow—Sand Foundation.

Contractor George D. Cannon, who took the work on a sub-contract from Brown & Connors, today completed laying the brick for the pavement on South Division street between East Milwaukee street and Court street and will probably be ready to pour cement filler tomorrow. Instead of being laid on a macadam foundation as is customary they have been put down on the native soil, properly graded and crowned and covered with a cushion of sand from two to three inches deep. Because of the gravel sub-soil and good drainage this arrangement is expected to be entirely satisfactory as well as considerably cheaper than a macadam foundation.

About half of the block on North Division street, between East Milwaukee street and North First street, is ready for rolling and brick. The rest requires considerable grading and there are fifty feet of sewer to be completed. Sand for use in paving is being taken from the great bank on the east side of North Division street. As soon as the stone is dry asphalt will be poured on the prepared surface for the asphalt macadam pavement on South Division street south of Second street.

The Players' protective fraternity, which is about as near as they've got to a Ball-players' Union, plans to make a few demands of their employers otherwise known as the club owners when these latter at their annual meeting, the American league magnates meeting in Chicago on November 6, and the National league bosses get together at New York sometime in December. The players have agreed not to sign contracts for the 1914 season till after the meetings of club owners.

At these meetings there will be presented a number of reforms drawn up by the players and until these have been acted upon by the club owners, and the outcome is known, the players have decided that they will not accept terms for the coming season. Something like 20 demands have been jotted down in black and white for the magnates' consideration. A few of the most important of them are:

When a player receives 10 days' notice of unconditional release he shall be free to sign with any team immediately.

National association players shall receive 10 days' notice before they can be released unconditionally. Players shall be transferred subject to all the terms of their contracts. If a regular contract is not tendered a probationary player before the expiration of the 45-day probationary period, he shall be a free agent. No player shall be discriminated against because of his connection with the fraternity. That when a player signs a contract for a certain salary he shall receive that salary until the end of his contract, whether or not he is relegated to the minors.

Gustavus T. Kirby, the president of the Amateur Athletic Union declares that he is in favor of a more liberality in dealing with the amateur athlete and particularly as regards the competition between amateurs and professionals. He favors the idea of an amateur being permitted to compete with a professional in special cases such as should John Paul Jones, the amateur mile champion enter into a race with a professional who might think he could beat Jones. In a case of this sort, however, Kirby points out that the competition should not take place without the sanction of the A. A. U. and then only when the race is for prizes alone. If there are gate receipts in such a case they would of course all have to go to the Amateur Athletic Union.

Freddie Welsh is hot on the heels of Willie Ritchie. At present writing he is beating it down to N. Y.

to be present at the ringside of the Cross-Ritchie go and challenge the winner. Should Ritchie win, Welsh is going to simply force him into a bout and declares that he is willing to give weight and in fact anything in order to get into the same ring with him. Welsh is complaining that Ritchie ran away from that Vancouver encounter and seems to infer that Willie is loathe to take a chance with him.

ELEVENS APPROACH TITLES SATURDAY

Big Nine Contenders to Settle Conference Title Saturday for Final Game—Eastern Struggles.

Football teams will approach a crisis for honors in battles tomorrow with Chicago battling Illinois at Chicago, Wisconsin meeting Minnesota at Madison, Notre Dame with the Army at West Point, Michigan battling with Syracuse at Ann Arbor, Harvard playing Cornell at Cambridge, the gridiron titles will now down to decide the final contenders. In the west Chicago will endeavor to keep up her championship race against Illinois, whom the Maroons have defeated thirteen times out of seventeen games, one being a tie. The next in importance for the big nine title is Wisconsin against their old rival Minnesota at Madison. Both teams have been defeated but are worthy of great development and a hard struggle is looked for. Wisconsin has showed poor football during her last two games and Minnesota was trounced by Nebraska. The winners of these two games should be the contenders for the conference title. Chicago looks stronger than their rivals and Wisconsin against the Maroons looks to be the final battle. Because of her surprise victory over Wisconsin, Michigan Aggies look able to win the title of the west, having defeated the mighty Michigan eleven, Nebraska, a contender for the western title, is to play Ames on the latter field. Indiana clashes with Ohio State at Columbus and their outlook is far from bright.

Considerable attention is drawn to the battle of Notre Dame against Army at West Point, the west against the east. The Army is in a weak condition this season while Notre Dame is a tower of strength. The soldiers have won their games by small scores while the Catholics have walked away with their rivals. Michigan after a two weeks' strengthening is to meet Syracuse.

In the east, the wonderful team of Harvard with her pair of round gainers, Briceley and Mahan, should trounce Cornell by a large score, in the most important game. Yale will have her hands full with Colgate at New Haven. Princeton will play Holy Cross at Princeton. Dartmouth, a feared eleven, will battle with Amherst. The Navy will clash with Lehigh.

Lawrence, by her victory over Beloit, should have easy sailing for the state title. Beloit hopes to finish the season without another stain against her slate, but will have to show better football than played against Lawrence to trim Ripon Saturday at Ripon.

An excellent program and the presence of a large number of thoroughbreds are expected to result in one of the most successful meetings that the club has held in recent years. HUNTING LICENSES MAY BREAK RECORD

Requests for Extra Consignments Received from Six Counties—Deer Season to Open.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 31.—Indications that the issue of hunting licenses will be larger this year than ever before are seen from the reports of county clerks to State Game Warden John A. Shotts. Requests for extra consignments of licenses have come from Ashland, Milwaukee, Fond du Lac, Crawford, Dunn and Lafayette counties.

The deer season opens Nov. 11 and continues twenty days. Non-resident licenses, at $25 each, for all kinds of game including deer, had been issued to the number of 133 yesterday, as compared with 136 on the same date last year, while non-resident small game licenses at $10 numbered 635, as compared with 596 last year.

The state department is pursuing the task of ridding lakes of rough fish with the usual success, the operations covering Lakes Koshong, Beaver Dam, Kegonsa, Waubesa and others. Several carloads of carp and buffalo fish have been sold and the money accruing to the general fund of the state.

From two to five carloads will be produced in the next ten days. If prices are low the department will hold the fish until the market rises. In such times the fish are held alive in sunken cribs in the water.

LOCALS MEET STRONG FOE FROM JEFFERSON

J. H. S. Promise to Make Northern Team Hurry to Win at Driving Park Tomorrow Morning.

With little practice this week, because of the bad weather, the local charges have fully recovered from the knocks received in the Beloit game a week back, and they are now prepared to do justice tomorrow, when they meet the highs from Jefferson at the Driving Park. Signal drills has been the layout all this week, except the one scrimmage on last Tuesday afternoon. As far as getting plays off successfully are concerned, the Curtis aggregation will probably outshine their rivals, but whether the lack of hard scrimmaging this week will tell on the regulars remains to be seen. Mentality and he also expects a large crowd present at the conflict. It is the first game on the local gridiron this season.

The probable lineup will be as follows: Sniley, I. G.; Hemming, I. L.; Badger, I. G.; Mount, C.; Jones, R. G.; McVicar, R. T.; Stewart, R. E.; Hayes, G. B.; Atwood, I. H.; Dearborn, R. H.; Dalton, I. B.

PONTIUS ONE OF MICHIGAN'S BEST

Miller Pontius, right tackle, is one of Yost's veterans, he having played with Michigan last season and the season before. He has given a good account of himself in the games thus far this year. Pontius hails from Circleville, O.

Ah, Yes!

"Why do you call Miss De Style a 'fictitious character?'" "Because she's made up."

BADGERS IN GOOD SHAPE FOR GOPHERS

Work of Past Week Has Put Them in Fine Fettle for Contest.

When Wisconsin and Minnesota meet at Camp Randall Saturday afternoon, the west can expect one of the hardest fought battles in the history of the two schools. Never in the history of the contests between the two schools has there been such an uncertainty as to the probable outcome of a game as there is this year.

After the weakness shown in the badgers' early games, especially after last Saturday's defeat, the gophers and their large crowd of followers gained confidence. Up until last week it was the general opinion of critics that the badgers would have little difficulty in defeating Minnesota. The gophers showed weakness early in the season, but last week's contest with the strong North Dakota eleven when the Minnesota squad won by a substantial score, showed that there was strength in their ranks.

Wisconsin supporters are every bit as confident as the Minnesotans. In spite of last week's defeat, the badger rooters feel that with an even break of luck the locals will come out on top. They take last week's defeat more optimistically than at first for they have come to realize that the Michigan aggie is at the present time probably the strongest team in the west. Then this week's practice has brought many improvements to the squad. The coaches have concentrated their efforts in strengthening the weak points. This has been accomplished with the aid of a number of old Wisconsin stars who have been at the camp to assist with the coaching for several days.

The badger squad, when it steps onto the field Saturday, will probably be in better condition than it has been for a big contest in many years. Every man is in fit trim, with not a blemish to mar his playing which will probably have its telling effects in the game. This is probably the first time for many years that the badger squad has gone through the season's preliminary games without some regular player being placed on the hospital list.

Reports from the gophers' camp are to the effect that they too will be in the finest of shape. They expect to have every regular in the game. Coach Williams has been working his squad overtime this week and with a telling effect, according to all reports coming from the gophers' camp.

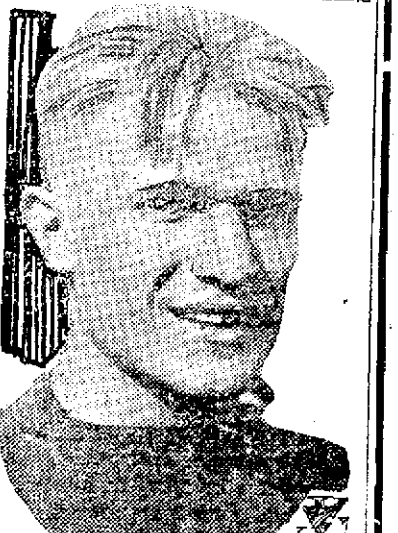

Last night the varsity lined up against the freshmen who have been drilled for more than a week with several of Coach Williams' famous shifts. In Tuesday's practice the famous Minnesota shift proved effective as operated by the varsity, but last night the varsity defense broke up the plays with little difficulty. The scrimmage, which was held on the freshmen field, was not conducted in regular play. The varsity was kept on the defense most of the time to give them practice in breaking up the shifts.

HUNTERS SHOW PHOTOS AND GET INTO TROUBLE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Neenah, Oct. 31.—Several Neenah hunters recently exhibited pictures of themselves to Game Warden H. H. Albrecht with from twenty to twenty-five ducks on their persons. They were ordered to appear in court and were given a severe lecture. They were ordered to destroy all the photos and plates and not be caught again with a picture of themselves with more than the limit of ducks allowed by law.

HIS DROP KICKS WIN MAROONS VICTORIES

Ted Russell, Chicago's new quarterback, is one of the most valuable men on the Maroon gridiron this fall. He has starred in every game thus far, and in the Purdue contest made two drop kicks which gave the game to Chicago, the final score being 6-0.

GREAT GRIDIRON GAMES ARE SET FOR TOMORROW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 31.—By far the most pretentious schedule thus far in the football season in the middle West is due to be carried out tomorrow. There are more important and more difficult games for the big teams and teams not so big. Chicago followers of the game will be given an opportunity to see the Illinois and Chicago university teams in conflict. The strong Wisconsin eleven will meet Minnesota at Madison, and Ames will take on Nebraska at Ames. Ohio State and Indiana will meet at Columbus. Michigan will meet Syracuse at Ann Arbor in one of the few games between the East and West this season. This game will be in the nature of a rubber, Syracuse and Michigan having won two games each in their series since they first met in 1908. In 1911 the game resulted in a tie score.

TREMENDOUS SALE OF TICKETS AT MADISON

Number Said to Have Reached 15,000. Mark With More to Sell.—Standing Room Will Be Well Occupied.

With the Wisconsin-Minnesota football eleven fighting it out at Camp Randall tomorrow afternoon, for the big nine title, indications point to the largest crowd in the history of football at the Madison institution. Since the homecoming was organized three years ago, interest has steadily increased, and alumni are expected to reach Madison by the thousands tomorrow.

The report is that fifteen thousand seats were sold up to this morning, with but a few hundred more to dispose of. When they are sold, standing room will have to be satisfactory to the late buyers.

Minnesota will bring over a thousand rooters, is the prediction in the Capitol City. They will occupy special prepared seats in front of the grandstand at the west of the field.

Remarkable Appeal.

It is said of the eloquent bishop of Ripon, that he once made the following appeal from the pulpit: "Brethren, I beg of you to take hold of your heart, and look it straight in the face."

Real "Howler."

School teacher recently asked his pupils to give him a sentence containing the word "notwithstanding." One boy wrote, "The man's trousers were worn out not with standing."

SUCCESS DEMANDS SACRIFICE.

The American Bankers' association is sending out to the press of the country a series of "talks on thrift," which are well worth reading. The following is a sample:

"The unequalled thrift of the French people makes France the world's banker. They save five hundred millions of dollars a year, which they put into the hands of a syndicate of their bankers to invest. There is now over a thousand millions of dollars in France awaiting investment and hoarded, because Europe is a powder magazine and plenty of fools around with matches, and because of deep distrust of American securities. Besides the vast sum spent in her internal improvements, France has loans abroad of two thousand millions of dollars, one-third of it, nearly, to Russia, while Germany is borrowing at high rates of interest wherever money can be had."—C. M. Depew.

Louis J. Horowitz, the sky-scraper builder, who in twenty years has risen from a position of $3 a week to one to $100,000 a year, in speaking about success, said:

"I go to bed at nine o'clock and I get up at five o'clock. I play a little, but my play is exercise to keep me in good trim for my office. I play to work—as other men work to play."

This little sidelight on a successful man emphasizes the fact that success demands sacrifice. If you want to get ahead you must make up your mind to give up some things now for the sake of enjoying them at a later time. In this we can learn a lot from the immigrants who come to our shores. Mr. Horowitz, above mentioned, came here from Russia as a youth. Six years ago a Russian girl, Ida Alper, then sixteen years old, came here, unable to speak a word of English. She got work in a Massachusetts shoe factory. The pay was small, but she attended to business, fitted herself to earn more, and saved. Last month her father, her mother, her brothers and her sisters came over, all on money that Ida had sent them.

"Have you noticed that, in the case of both old settlers and new comers, those who are able to take advantage of the opportunities that arise are those who have some ready money? Such opportunities come to you. Are you ready for them? If you are not ready now, get ready! You can do so by adopting a regular plan of saving and sticking to it. Thousands of other men and women have successfully trod this path of industry and thrift. You can do likewise. A savings bank will encourage your thrift by providing you with a place of perfect security for your savings and by paying you compound interest on your money."

POISON PROTECTION.

Another man has arisen in the middle of the night, stumbled into the bathroom, reached into the medicine cabinet and taken bichloride of mercury instead of the headache remedy he sought. His ending came in the manner usual under the circumstances.

Undoubtedly the box bore in large letters the warning, "poison," and the imprint of a skull and crossbones. But he was suffering acutely and probably was in the half-dazed condition that comes of tantalizing hours on the verge of sleep. And he did not turn on the light.

Druggists are careful in complying with all the safeguards provided by the law for the sale of poisons. But the suggestion has more than once been made that poisons, especially the kind likely to be included among the drugs kept on hand in households, be dressed up in packages of unusual shape so that they can instantly be identified by the sense of touch.

This is a protection which may not be needed if ordinary caution is observed, but it seems one that it would be wise to provide.

WHO SWATHED PRESIDENT?

According to the Chicago Inter Ocean, some one has swathed the mind of President Wilson on the currency bill. The editorial which follows explains why this remark is made and perhaps there is something worth considering in it. One has but to attend a session of the senate currency committee to be impressed with the idea that the proposed democratic currency measure is merely the old question of Free Silver dressed in another garb to meet the modern conditions. It sounds like Bryan in his palmy days of the "cross of gold," and if he did not write the chief portions of the measure he had a hand in dictating them. President Wilson, however, takes the credit for the measure and his public utterances substantiate this claim. However, the Inter Ocean believes someone swathed his mind on the subject, and says:

"The confidential speech of President Wilson to the country's newspaper correspondents in Washington, delivered immediately after Mr. Wilson's inauguration last March and never before published, is printed in Harper's Weekly. In it occurs a passage of more than passing interest in view of developments since that time. The president said:

"The only way I can succeed is by not having my mind live in Washington. My body has got to live there, but my mind has got to live in the United States or else I will fail. Now you fellows can help me and help everybody else by just swathing my mind and other people's minds in the atmosphere of the thought of the United States. The great advantage that you enjoy is that you represent papers all over the country, and therefore you can import the opinion and impulses of the country into Washington, and import it after a fashion that nobody else can employ."

"That was an excellent idea, excellently put. It would have been very well for the president to have lived up to it entirely in his official life. But has he?"

"It may be granted that he has, in the main, but certainly with respect to the currency bill he has not. Had he diligently read the papers of the nation he would have found that the Bryanistic heresies of the bill by no means represent the opinion and impulses of the country."

"In short, upon the currency question the president's mind seems to have been swathed by Secretary of State Bryan and not by the atmosphere of the thought of the United States." And it would be well for his reputation and the fate of his pet measure were he to unswathe his mind of its present wrappings as soon as possible."

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan are preparing another peace proposition for Mexico, which will doubtless look well on paper. The trouble is not so much in formulating a plan, as to know what to do with it when completed. Mexico is considerable of a territory and the principle product of its soil is a banner crop of disturbances. The nation is without a recognized head, and the question of authority to consider any sort of a proposition is the troublesome question, as the president has already discovered to his embarrassment.

The government has been running another land-lottery at North Platte, Nebraska, and four Wisconsin men were among the prize winners. Five hundred and seventy claims was the attraction. And thousands of speculators from all parts of the country spent money freely in their ambition to get something for nothing. All lottery schemes are under the ban except federal land lotteries, which seem to be a necessity. Some other way should be devised to dispose of the public domain.

Janesville ought to plan for some gala celebration when the new Milwaukee street bridge is opened. It might be a good time for the Twenty-five Thousand club to hold a mid-winter circus or something of that kind to raise funds for continuing the campaign of advertising the city.

Have a Fire-Extinguisher. A reliable fire-extinguisher, which throws chemicals instead of water, should hang in every home, in the barn and in the stable. Seconds are precious when fire breaks out, and the small, inexpensive extinguishers are so simple of use and quick of action that they at once arrest the progress of a small blaze. Motorists have found the little extinguisher invaluable.

CUT DOWN TRAIN SERVICE TO KEGONSA AND WAUBESA

Orders have been received at the local ticket office of the C. M. & St. Paul railway, that beginning Saturday, November the first, all trains operating between Janesville and Madison, with the one exception of the seven-fifty in the morning, will not stop at either Lake Kegonsa or Waubesa, going or returning.

This means that passengers desiring to go to either of these lakes, must take the early train at seven-fifty in the morning, and return at eight in the evening. The service has been dropped off considerably, due to the change of weather conditions, making it unnecessary to have all trains stop, other than by signal.

"THE TEST"

Here is a picture you should not miss. Julia Swayne Gordon, always charming, plays the part of Eleanor Anstruther, and plays it well. Her husband's too deep interest in his profession gives an opportunity for a supposed friend, and she becomes all but entangled in the web that he weaves about her. South African fever plays its part in the final disentanglement.

Carefully Bought Oriental Rugs at Lowered Prices

Our large stocks of Oriental Rugs, both small and large sizes, are truly gems of the Orient and pieces which you will admire and marvel at their superb colorings and unique designs. Of one thing be sure—in the Big Store stock of Oriental Rugs there is no ruff-raff, no haphazard collection of tag ends of promiscuous buying; no "washed" Rugs—weakened in fibre by chemicals. Every rug is here for the reason that it is intrinsically worthy, and to this desirableness is added the attraction of low price.

A year ago The Big Store entered into the Oriental Rug business. The first act was to clear away the cobwebs of delusion that generally associate with Oriental Rugs. True, we allied ourselves with Rugs that needed no deception to sell them; we have no rug on our floor that does not represent the highest quality that could be procured at its selling price. But it was almost like a thunderbolt from a clear sky to the trade when we placed on every rug One Price marked in plain figures and dared anyone to challenge it.

This is why people who want the best Rugs that money can buy come here.

Distribution of Travel Books

The literature describing the pleasure tours which lure the modern tourist in such numbers, is unusually attractive this season. In preparing these booklets, the world is ransacked for interesting photographs, while the text prepared by experienced writers is a valuable contribution to the literature of travel. A series of booklets has been prepared for free distribution, descriptive of the pleasure tours of the various steamship lines this season which set a new standard for such publications. The books describe with profuse illustrations the pleasure tours to the West Indies and the Panama Canal; to the Mediterranean, the Orient and India and around the world. These books are free to the public at the GAZETTE TRAVEL BUREAU. In their general appearance they compare favorably with the work of the best magazines. Any traveler who has made or contemplates making these tours will find these booklets a valuable addition to his library.

CHICAGOANS ASK U. S. TO JOIN PROTEST TO CZAR IN RITUAL CASE; SEEK GOVERNMENT INFLUENCE AGAINST PERSECUTION

Great mass-meetings have been held in Chicago in protest against the Russian government's treatment of Mendel Beilis, now on trial for his life at Kiev, Russia, for an alleged "ritual murder." Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, have united in asserting their belief that Beilis is guiltless, and have asked the U. S. government to protest to St. Petersburg.

Beilis is said by the police and the officials of Kiev to have slain a Christian boy to obtain Christian blood for use in rituals of the Jewish religion.

Among the speakers who have joined in denunciation of the Russian government's course in persecuting Beilis are Jane Addams of Hull House, Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones and Rabbi Emil Hirsch.

PREPARED TO COPE WITH MISCHIEVOUS

Janeville Police Force Will See That Halloween Fun Makers Do Not Damage Property.

Tonight is the festival of Halloween when the small boy feels that he has not only liberties denied him at other times, but also, and quite mistakenly, that he has the license to carry away and damage the property of others. The police force will be better prepared than ever before to prevent the mischief-makers from running to excess. All the members of the police force, both day and night men, will be in service, besides a number of volunteer plain clothes assistants. They will have at their disposal an automobile, a horse and buggy and the police motorcycle which is capable of carrying two men, so there will be no no-man's land which cannot be reached by them in a very short time. Property owners, however, will do well not to depend upon the police for protection, for they cannot be omnipresent. Movable articles, door-mats, lawn seats, and other paraphernalia had best be chained down or placed behind locked doors. Soaping windows is also inadvisable, as the vandals indulge in it risk arrest and punishment.

Halloween also has its innocent side, though no less merry—the jack-o'-lantern, the apple bobbing contests, and other pastimes associated with the ancient festival. There will be many gatherings throughout the city this evening, which will give more pleasure than a successful chase by the police.

DARLINGTON FARMER BLOWS OUT THE GAS

H. L. Smith Believes in Fresh Air Cure Which Prevented His Death at St. Charles Hotel.

H. L. Smith, a farmer residing near Darlington, Wisconsin, owes his life to the fact that he is an exponent of the fresh air treatment. He took a room at the St. Charles hotel in this city on Wednesday and upon retiring turned on the gas light down low and then, very carelessly, but quite innocently, he proceeded to blow out the flame.

But Smith believes in fresh air and opened the window of his room wide before he turned in. Awakening in the morning the atmosphere was rather chilly and he closed the window and returned for a last nap before arising. A little later J. J. Wright, a real estate dealer, who had come to Janeville with Smith to look over some farm lands, and who occupied a room adjoining Smith, detected the odor of gas and made an investigation. He knocked on the door and received no answer. Looking through the transom he saw Smith, apparently lifeless in bed. The landlord was hastily summoned and an entrance to the room was effected through a side door.

He was taken down stairs and a physician called. No trouble was experienced in bringing him to his senses from the effects of the gas, as only a small amount had escaped into the room, the opening of the door not being on full force. Mr. Smith left for his home last evening with a better knowledge of city conveniences.

Heart to Heart Talks

By CHARLES N. LORIE

UNFINISHED.

In all ages and in all lands, whenever and wherever men have thought on the things of life and death, they have conceived the idea of a life to succeed this one. They have pictured to themselves lives of everlasting bliss for those who are righteous on this earth and of eternal torment for the wicked.

This life has been considered a part of a whole. It is only a fraction, say the believers in a future state. It is incomplete, unfinished.

To symbolize this belief the ancient Hebrews, who were wise in their day and generation, ordained that a man's dwelling place should be left incomplete in some detail. They made it a law of religious observance that the synagogue should contain some rough corner, some place obviously left unfinished. To this day orthodox Hebrew synagogues contain the unfinished place.

Moreover, some orthodox Hebrews, strict in their observance of the ancient laws, leave portions of their houses incomplete. Even wealthy men among them follow the law.

In the house of Lord Rothschild of London, one of the wealthiest men on earth, there is an unfinished corner, left thus purposely to indicate the belief of the owner of the house that it is only a temporary resting place for his body. He believes that for his soul there is a higher, better, finer resting place elsewhere.

All of us leave our houses of life unfinished.

There is always something to complete. There is always some ideal to strive for. There is always something higher and better still unattained, but attainable.

Perfection is not for imperfect human beings. Our lives are like the asymptote, the straight line which constantly approaches a curve, but, no matter how indefinitely extended, never touches it.

We may approach perfection, according to the light that is within us, but the fallibility of our nature will prevent our touching it.

Make your house of life as rich as you can. Adorn it with the treasures of love and understanding. There will always be some unfinished corner.

But if you honestly and sincerely endeavor to build it well, to have within it nothing that you feel to be unworthy, you need not be ashamed of its unfinished state.

No man has ever had a finished house of life. The final touches are put on after what we call death makes master workmen of us.

SEE DEMONSTRATION OF THE LUNG MOTOR

City Officials, Physicians, and Others Examine Machine to Save From Death by Asphyxiation.

Mayor James A. Fathers, Fire Chief H. C. Klein, Health Officers Dr. S. B. Buckmaster, former Health Officer M. J. Cunningham and other physicians and citizens witnessed a demonstration of the lung motor at the west side fire station this morning by Louis D. Jones of Chicago. This is a machine used for the same purpose as the pulmotor, that of saving persons from drowning, asphyxiation, or death by interrupted respiration of any kind, through artificially creating respiration and the use of oxygen where necessary. It differs from the pulmotor in that the power is furnished by the operator instead of by the pressure of oxygen gas in a steel tank. By moving an indicator hand the stroke of the pump can be adjusted to any size of lung, from a new-born infant's to that of an adult. The pressure is kept from becoming excessive by a diaphragm. One cylinder forces air into the lungs and the other draws it out. Speed of operation can be determined by the operator. An auxiliary to the lung motor is an oxygen generator, the gas being generated by dissolving a cartridge of chemical in water. The machine can be adjusted so that it uses whole oxygen or any proportion of it to air that is desired. It can also be used to remove water from the lungs in drowning cases.

HAD 14 HANGED, THEN WENT TO CONGRESS

(c) Harris & Ewing.

Thaddeus H. Caraway.

Thaddeus H. Caraway, the new member of congress from the First district of Arkansas, was prosecuting attorney of a judicial district in his state before he went to Washington. Among the convictions he secured as prosecuting attorney were those of fourteen men who were hanged. One day after the conviction of the fourteenth the judge called Mr. Caraway to the bench and asked: "Do you think you are about caught up with this hanging business?" "I certainly have," replied Caraway. "Then the court is adjourned until the next term," said the judge. Mr. Caraway is a Democrat, was born in Missouri and is about forty years old.

Tells What He Hears— To The Wrong Person

MR. A was one day a guest at dinner at a house which was brightened by a seven-year-old youngster named Frankie. Tea was served, but the visitor did not immediately drink, as he was engaged in conversation.

Finally Frankie said: "Mr. A. do drink your tea; I am awfully anxious to see you drink."

"Why are you so anxious, Frankie?" the visitor asked. "Oh," replied the little imp, "father said you drank like a fish."

All of Them Mysteries

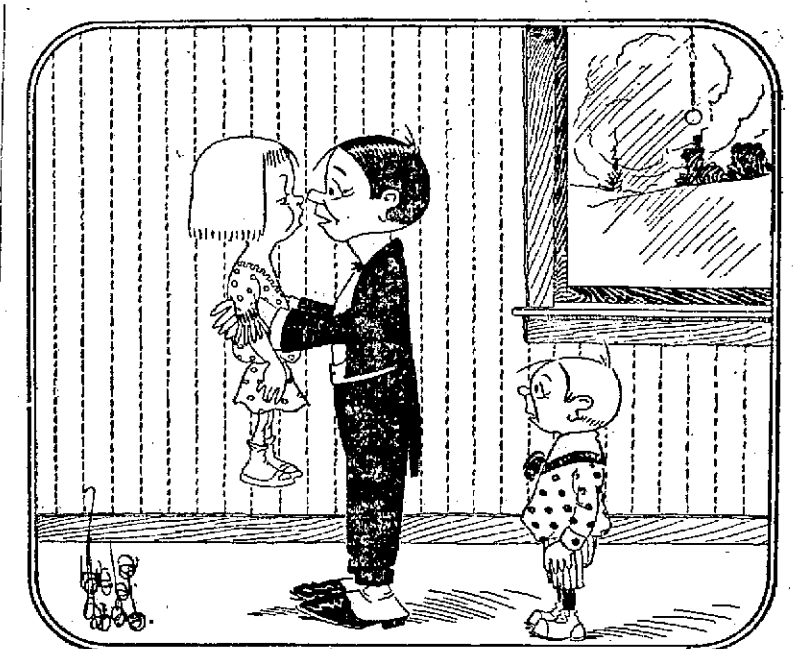

CHE reflections of one of these wise writers who just bubble over with wisdom caught her eye.

"To be happy," she quoted, "a wife should always remain somewhat of a mystery to her husband."

"If happiness lies in that," he retorted, "all wives should be supremely happy, and marriage—any kind of a marriage—must be the gate to feminine happiness."

"But some men," she protested, "do not think women such a mystery."

"True," he admitted, "I didn't race, but I'm married now."

DIDN'T LIKE HIM.

Cholly—And, Lulu, I suppose you know I'm going to be your brother-in-law?

Lulu—Yes, but t'ank goodness I'll be able to choose me own husband some time and not have him thrust on me.

POLICEWOMEN SAY THAT TANGO'S O. K.

Miss Alice Clement learning to tango.

The tango is perfectly proper—if you stand six inches apart and the girl end of the sketch wears an accordion pleated skirt.

So have ruled Chicago's ten policewomen, who were taught the mysteries of the tango by a Chicago dancing master a few days ago. They wished to learn whether the new dances endangered the morals of the young.

The picture shows Miss Alice Clement, woman cop assigned to do detective work and famous as a crook catcher, taking her first tango lesson.

FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIANS

ALBERT PAYSON TERNUM

QUANAH.

A twelve-year-old Indian boy, Quanah by name, was left an orphan and a pauper in a Comanche Indian tribe on the Canadian river. His father, Chief Fetacoma, had been killed in battle with the government troops on December 18, 1860. In the same fight, his mother (said to have been originally a captive frontier girl named Cynthia Parker) was captured. Their friends were slain or imprisoned. The boy was thus left at twelve utterly alone in the world, without family, without a penny's worth of property, without prospects. It was a start in life hopeless enough to crush many spirits. But Quanah was the sort of man to overcome obstacles, not by smashing through them, but by crawling around them.

A Comanche's Love Affair.

He made friends with other camp boys, whom he induced to share their food with him and to give him their castoff blankets. Little by little he managed to gain a strong influence over these lads, until, poor as he was, they recognized him as their leader. Then, in early manhood, he fell in love with Weckeah, daughter of his tribal chief, Yellow Bear. The girl readily returned the tall, handsome pauper's affection. But among Indians matrimony is also a matter of money. A penniless lover cannot hope to wed the daughter of a chief. For chiefs' daughters are worth many ponies or blankets or firearms to their fathers.

For a time the young Comanche's secret love affair drifted along tamely enough. Then came Ekitoakup, a wealthy chief, who offered Yellow Bear ten ponies for Weckeah's hand in marriage to one of his sons. While Yellow Bear was debating the offer Quanah heard of it. He had but one scrappy pony to his name. But he hurried to all his friends and managed to borrow nine more. He hastened in triumph with these to Yellow Bear's tepee, rehearsing his proposal as he went. But on his arrival he found Ekitoakup had raised the offer to twenty ponies. And Yellow Bear had accepted.

It was a moment either for despair or for quick action. Quanah chose the latter. He rallied twenty-one of the young men of the tribe who were devoted friends of his. That night, escorted by these twenty-one youths, he and Weckeah eloped. They knew that Comanche law demands a death penalty for such an act, and that Ekitoakup would follow hot on their trail to enforce that penalty. So they rode day and night as fast as they could urge their wiry ponies, and did not cease their flight until they were safe in the mountain fastnesses of Settery County, Tex.

There Quanah and his stolen bride began their wedded life. As they were still penniless, Quanah led his twenty-one young braves upon a series of horse stealing raids into the grass country. So rich did the little band become at this occupation that other Indians joined them. The braves returned by stealth to their old homes and bore to the camp brides or their own. Soon Quanah was chief of a tribe several hundred strong. Ekitoakup heard of his whereabouts, but when he found him so powerful the old chief wisely consented to abandon his plan of vengeance in return for the payment of twenty ponies (the original dowry price of Weckeah). Quanah readily gave him the ponies, remarking as he did so, "I know a ranch where I can steal twenty more before tomorrow."

Now that he was no more an outlaw, Quanah returned to the Comanches. He made himself chief of the tribe in whose village house he had lived as a beggar. There, from a stronghold in the Wichita mountains, he reigned over the Indians for miles about and grew daily richer and more powerful. Incidentally, he married four more wives. Seeing the folly of wasting his power in useless warfare, Quanah surrendered to Gen. McKenzie in 1876 and became a powerful citizen of what was later Oklahoma. He persuaded the government to give his tribe good farming lands.

Quanah proudly called himself "the friend of Theodore Roosevelt" (whom he accompanied once on a wolf hunt), and he often went to Washington on diplomatic errands for his people. He once even gravely requested that he be sent to the United States senate when Oklahoma should become a state. To white settlers he called himself by the semi-civilized name of "Quanah Parker." He also desired to be known as "the father of the red man and the brother of the white man." He built a two-story "mansion" for himself and named it "the Comanche White House." Thence he ruled his people wisely and kept them at peace.

Of the horse stealing days which founded his fortune Quanah never cared to talk much. Nor of the love episode that turned him eventually from a beggar into a great chief. Perhaps, now that Weckeah was merely one of his five wives and no longer the beautiful girl for whom he had risked life, this romantic affair seemed to him less noteworthy than of yore.

"Suburb."

When did the word "suburb" first find its way into the language? It is used in a recently discovered fourteenth century ordinance of the City Guild of Carpenters providing that the members should attend the funeral of anyone of the fraternity resident within the city "or in the suburbs." The natural inference is that even then it was part of the everyday talk of the citizens.—Fall Mall Gazette.

Fads and Fashions

New York, Nov. 1.—There is certainly no lack of extreme models among those displayed in the most fashionable shops this fall. Yet, after all, comparatively few women, even among the wealthy, are ever seen wearing the most extreme styles. These fantastic creations are affected only by certain women who "don't care" so long as they create a sensation, and others who are either women of the stage or members of the demi-monde, or both.

In both suits and dresses there is a tendency to drape the back of the skirt to give it an upturned effect, which makes the back look like the front. Skirts in all cases are narrow at the foot, so that slashes are a necessity. Each short and extreme slash is used, some reaching almost to the waist line. The fringed garter is worn with evening dresses that are slashed to an extreme. The fringe is worn below the knee, and is long and heavy, concealing the leg to a great extent. It is in the color to match the costume.

The fashionable skirt is short both in evening and practical costumes. One of the new ideas is the bustle effect, which is carried out on evening dresses by the use of draperies and bows placed directly in the back. The hoop effect is achieved by means of a three-tiered skirt, with the edges turned in ribbon concealing feather boning. The tango effect is produced by close fitting bloomers finished at the foot with a narrow trimming. The bloomers extend to the waist line, over which the material is draped to give the panache effect in the back.

Brilliant colors are used this autumn, but they are smoky. That seems to be the only word to describe the dull haze that has been imparted to their surface by the dyes. Purple, yellow, red and bright blue have a softening tone that is remarkably well done and carries the conviction that colors can be worn and brilliant-looking at the same time. This smoky tone is especially apparent in the new blues and purples.

The new coats with waistscoats, which Paquin, Bernard and other famous designers have shown this autumn promise to be decidedly popular and in most cases they are rather coming. The backs of these new coats are excessively long-waisted and they have no belt, which is an innovation in this month's fashions. The plaques are laid into two or more wide pleats that spring out and flare from the body because they are unstitched. They start at the end of the long waisted line, several inches from each side of the middle. The front, which is cut away, are full enough to ripple at the hem, and they reach the back and they give a flat effect to the figure in front, although even the longer waistscoats ripple at the hem. This is probably due to the influence of the market, so fashionable at the present time. The sense of revers on the majority of the new coats is strongly emphasized. That there will be a great demand for waistscoats is beyond doubt and they will be seen in a great deal during the late autumn and early winter season.

One of the smartest things in the line of waistscoats is one of bright sulphur yellow pea de chamissois, which is only another name for velours de laine of a certain variety. This is fastened in a straight line from low waist to the chin, with bullet buttons of gun metal, and the loose, rolling collar stands higher than the coat and frames the face. There are small pockets on each side. Over the waistscoat a woman wears an inch wide black grosgrain ribbon, which holds her watch suspended in the lower pocket. Such waistscoats made of Duverdy velvet or corduroy are unusually good for cold climates.

The velvets, plushes, duvetines and wool velours, combined with fur trimmings and fancy waistscoats, make the suits this fall very elegant. Owing to the heavy texture of even the finest velvets, sheer materials are used in the waist portion, being more suited to the average indoor temperature. Those dresses designed particularly for street wear, however, have the waist of velvet, and sometimes a lining is provided.

Fur trimmings are not only used on street suits of velvet, but also on velvet evening and reception gowns. The heavy texture of the velvet is very favorable to long lines and for velvet evening gowns. Then a short drapery is desired, tunics of tulle, chiffon or lace are arranged over the long draperies. The most popular leavies for dressy suits are the embroidered and moire velvets. They are used in combination with satin, crepe meteor, panne velvet and moire silk. For practical use coat suits of velvet are trimmed with chinchilla, squirrel, fox, skunk and ermine.

As a refreshing change from white waists, the black lace waist, usually in chantilly, is made over flesh color or white lining, which will give equally good service with a newer style. They are just as suited as white waists, some having the foundation of net, chiffon or lace in white, with the black chantilly lace in bolero or jacket arrangement, with the lower section of the sleeves and the front of the waist in white.

Velvet is much used in combination with fur, and velvet muffs edged with fur bid fair to prove as popular as fur muffs edged with ruffles of velvet. One effective velvet trimming takes the form of a velvet cord, made of loops of velvet cord, formed by rolling by two-inch or three-inch strip of velvet. The loops of the chain measure two or three inches across. These chains are fastened across the face of the muffs or are used as collars.

The collar of a heavy, tailor-made suit does not look well directly next to the skin of the neck. That much has been proved since cool weather has brought out winter suits. Thin, light summer suits looked well enough so far as their collars were concerned. In fact, most of their collars were of white or other light material. But a tailored blue serge makes a hard and collarless blouse worn, unless it is fitted with an upstanding ruche, does nothing to soften the line.

The net, high boned collar used last winter broke the line, and put a sufficiently wide strip of white between collar and neck to give a soft finish about the throat. There are many small white collars that can be worn over the coat collar to gain the softness and finish desired.

Those of fine net interfere the least with the line and effect of the coat collar. Those of white mull, finely embroidered, and edged with Valenciennes lace, are also good with the coat collar. Some of net and lace and embroidery combined, are too elaborate for wear with the plain street suit, and that sort is the kind to choose for afternoon suits of silk and velvet.

Hats of ivory white plush are the vogue of the moment, and white or brown skunk fur is the favored trimming for headgear of this type.

Labels That Won't Come Off.

To label a bottle so that the label is waterproof and cannot fall off, the following plan is recommended in "Camera Craft": A strip of black passe-partout binding tape long enough to reach round the bottle and to overlap a little is used, and the writing is done with white ink or paint. A little hot paraffin wax poured over it makes it waterproof. The white letters on a background can be read in a very feeble light.

A novel electric gas valve has been recently invented by a Parisian which works with direct pressure on a gas outlet. The device consists of a very small flat metal chamber screwed in between the fixture and the burner, and the gas enters the chamber containing a very simple electromagnet-valve device, then passes into the burner. Lighting is effected by lifting a small tube adjacent to the mantle which contains a platinum spiral traversed by the current to bring it to redness, then it is raised to white heat by catalytic action of the gas, producing a flame to light the mantle. Lighting follows instantly on pressing a button.

Among the interesting observations which resulted from the investigations made by those sent into the Arctic waters on the government boat Seneca was the explosion of the theory that the presence of a field of ice might be detected by a sudden change in the temperature. In many cases the most delicate instruments with which the craft was equipped failed to register any difference in the temperature in the immediate presence of an iceberg. Another notion which was proven to be a fallacy was that the iceberg's proximity might be detected by the echo, but this demonstration was found to be dependent on the shape and angle of the face of the berg. There might be an echo or none.

In Holland, where a great many baths are given, the present custom is to remove them from the ground by hand, which is a long and tedious process. There is a demand for a machine which will perform this labor and in a recent report from the American consul at Amsterdam, attention is called to the fact that American invention might supply this demand and reap a generous profit, for the people are ready to accept any simple piece of mechanism which will relieve them of this labor. The General Society for Bath Culture which has its office at Spaarndijk, 11, Haarlem, has offered a prize which amounts to more than four hundred dollars for the best contrivance of this character.

The figures of the condition of the bicycle industry at the present time seem to indicate that there is likely to be a revival of the favor in which this machine was held some years ago. It is not anticipated that it will be the fashionable fad that it was at that time, but that as many wheels will be made and used. In Europe the use of the bicycle is becoming more and more general and as the United States supplies a great many of these machines, a revival of the industry in this country may be looked for. According to the reports of the Cycle and Automobile Manufacturers' Association of France, there were in that country at the close of last year 80,125 motor cars, 10,641 motor cycles and 2,939,385 bicycles. This means that one person in thirteen owns a bicycle.

How the Revival Came

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.

Dean of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—Now for a long season Israel had been without the true God. II Chron. 32.

The condition of Israel calling for a revival at the time is set before us in the words, "Now for a long season Israel had been without the true God." To be without the true God is certainly a call for a revival. But what is it for a nation, or a church, or an individual, to be without the true God? In the present case it meant the ordinances of religion. "They were without a teaching priest, and without law." (2) They were without the inner experiences of religion. "In those times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in." (3) They were without the outward blessings of religion. "And nation was destroyed of nation, and city of city; for God did vex them with all adversity."

Is not this the picture of a church or an individual professing Christianity who is without God? The gospel may be preached in that church, the ordinances administered, and the prayer meeting regularly announced, but the whole round of exercises, while possessing the form of godliness, is without the power. There is no real power in the lives of Christians existing in this way, no realization of their standing in Christ, and no joy or gladness in their testimony and service. They come into church and go out of it again, as it is said of these Israelites, without "peace."

There is a state of moral and spiritual adversity.

Now how did the revival come? There are ten steps of progress indicated to the finish:

(1) "The spirit of God came upon Asariah, the son of Obed," verse 1. The source of every true revival is divine. It can not be worked up or preached up, but it may be prayed up. "Ask and ye shall receive." It began in this instance in a single individual, a prophet, like an ordinary minister or evangelist of our own day. The spirit of God fell on him, anointing him for service.

(2) He went out and said, "hear ye me, the Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you," verse 2. What a simple thing to say, how almost childish, and yet what results it produced! Ah, it makes a great deal of difference to a message whether it comes from anointed lips or not. Now what are we told here? Only this self-evident truth, that we can not be revived unless the Lord is with us. But we are told something else also, viz., that the Lord is with us while we are with him. And what is it for us to be with him? Only to be living in obedience to him, that is all.

(3) "When Asa (the king) heard these words . . . he took courage," verse 3. The first thing the minister or pastor wants in the work of a revival is courage. He must believe that God is with him and that something is possible, nay, likely, to be accomplished. The steps of the revival now follow in regular order.

(4) He "put away the abominable idols out of all the land."

(5) He "renewed the altar of the Lord," same verse.

(6) He "gathered all" the people together; "for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance when they saw that the Lord his God was with him." The revival is now on. The crowds are coming. The church has renounced her worldliness; entertainments and euchre parties have given place to the prayer meeting. "The altar of the Lord" has been substituted for "the abominable idols," and it has proved "a drawing card." The news are filling up. The world is cold and the people are gathering around the fire of the Lord.

(7) "They offered unto the Lord the same time, of the spoil which they had brought," verse 11. Here is a further evidence of the revival. When the spirit of God stirs up a people the coffers of the treasury begin to show it. The people offer willingly when the spirit of God prompts them to do it, and he so prompts them through the ministration of his word.

(8) "They entered into covenant to seek the Lord . . . with all their heart and with all their soul," verse 13.

(9) "And all Judah rejoiced," verse 13.

(10) "And he (the Lord) was found of them; and the Lord gave them rest round about," same verse. Thus the revival came. The preaching of the word was with power. The commandments of God were obeyed. The assurance of personal salvation was a living strength. Peace with God was accompanied by the peace of God.

SCIENCE NOTES

A novel electric gas valve has been recently invented by a Parisian which works with direct pressure on a gas outlet. The device consists of a very small flat metal chamber screwed in between the fixture and the burner, and the gas enters the chamber containing a very simple electromagnet-valve device, then passes into the burner. Lighting is effected by lifting a small tube adjacent to the mantle which contains a platinum spiral traversed by the current to bring it to redness, then it is raised to white heat by catalytic action of the gas, producing a flame to light the mantle. Lighting follows instantly on pressing a button.

Among the interesting observations which resulted from the investigations made by those sent into the Arctic waters on the government boat Seneca was the explosion of the theory that the presence of a field of ice might be detected by a sudden change in the temperature. In many cases the most delicate instruments with which the craft was equipped failed to register any difference in the temperature in the immediate presence of an iceberg. Another notion which was proven to be a fallacy was that the iceberg's proximity might be detected by the echo, but this demonstration was found to be dependent on the shape and angle of the face of the berg. There might be an echo or none.

In Holland, where a great many baths are given, the present custom is to remove them from the ground by hand, which is a long and tedious process. There is a demand for a machine which will perform this labor and in a recent report from the American consul at Amsterdam, attention is called to the fact that American invention might supply this demand and reap a generous profit, for the people are ready to accept any simple piece of mechanism which will relieve them of this labor. The General Society for Bath Culture which has its office at Spaarndijk, 11, Haarlem, has offered a prize which amounts to more than four hundred dollars for the best contrivance of this character.

The figures of the condition of the bicycle industry at the present time seem to indicate that there is likely to be a revival of the favor in which this machine was held some years ago. It is not anticipated that it will be the fashionable fad that it was at that time, but that as many wheels will be made and used. In Europe the use of the bicycle is becoming more and more general and as the United States supplies a great many of these machines, a revival of the industry in this country may be looked for. According to the reports of the Cycle and Automobile Manufacturers' Association of France, there were in that country at the close of last year 80,125 motor cars, 10,641 motor cycles and 2,939,385 bicycles. This means that one person in thirteen owns a bicycle.

How the Revival Came

TEXT—Now for a long season Israel had been without the true God. II Chron. 32.

The condition of Israel calling for a revival at the time is set before us in the words, "Now for a long season Israel had been without the true God." To be without the true God is certainly a call for a revival. But what is it for a nation, or a church, or an individual, to be without the true God? In the present case it meant the ordinances of religion. "They were without a teaching priest, and without law." (2) They were without the inner experiences of religion. "In those times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in." (3) They were without the outward blessings of religion. "And nation was destroyed of nation, and city of city; for God did vex them with all adversity."

Is not this the picture of a church or an individual professing Christianity who is without God? The gospel may be preached in that church, the ordinances administered, and the prayer meeting regularly announced, but the whole round of exercises, while possessing the form of godliness, is without the power. There is no real power in the lives of Christians existing in this way, no realization of their standing in Christ, and no joy or gladness in their testimony and service. They come into church and go out of it again, as it is said of these Israelites, without "peace."

There is a state of moral and spiritual adversity.

Now how did the revival come? There are ten steps of progress indicated to the finish:

(1) "The spirit of God came upon Asariah, the son of Obed," verse 1. The source of every true revival is divine. It can not be worked up or preached up, but it may be prayed up. "Ask and ye shall receive." It began in this instance in a single individual, a prophet, like an ordinary minister or evangelist of our own day. The spirit of God fell on him, anointing him for service.

(2) He went out and said, "hear ye me, the Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you," verse 2. What a simple thing to say, how almost childish, and yet what results it produced! Ah, it makes a great deal of difference to a message whether it comes from anointed lips or not. This will be the first holiday season that the parcels post system has been in operation and the department at Washington is making special precaution to make sure that the vast increase of business will move quickly and safely.

"The department is desirous that the handling of the mails this year shall be expeditious and economically managed with as little criticism as possible and the public given the benefit of quick and accurate transportation and delivery," were the instructions sent to Postmaster C. L. Valentine.

"We expect a great deal of parcel post business during Christmas time as nearly all the people will use the parcels post system and we have arranged for a delivery wagon on each side of the river and will add new men to our force to secure prompt dispatch," expressed one of the local postoffice employees. "In turn we ask the co-operation of the public to mail their holiday gifts as early as possible and wish to revise the slogan, 'Do your Christmas shopping early.' Attention is called to the fact that the senders can place the words 'Do Not Open Until Christmas' on the parcels. If the public will do this they will be taking a great step in helping the employees of the postoffice in the systematic handling of the great volume of mail, avoiding congestion and delay."

Orders were given in the department circular to the postmaster that employees should meet the situation in such a way that the public will be thoroughly satisfied with the character of the service.

She was an affectionate and loving mother. She was buried on her 34th birthday.

She leaves a husband and two children, two brothers, William and Ray, of Harmony, and a sister, Mrs. Elmer Jones of Beloit, to mourn her departure.

SEE IF THE CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

Mother! Don't hesitate! If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, mother. If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach is clogged and needs a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, if feverish, stomachy, flat, breath bad, has stomachache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently move out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative," they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Rev. O'Neill officiated. John Kirkpatrick of Redburg has been spending a few days with friends here.

The entertainment committee of Emerald Grove church, under the leadership of the people that the first number of the lecture course will be given Nov. 27th.

Mrs. J. W. Thoma entertained friends from Clinton Sunday.

Try a Coin.

Many women ruin the nap of the cloth in scraping mud from their garments with a knife or sharp object. Take a coin, a half dollar, and scrape the mud off with this after it is dry and it will not harm the nap in the least.

On the Spur of the Moment

Spaghetti.

When Maggie cooks spaghetti, gosh. It takes the longest while.

She has to put in forty things. To do it up in style.

There's nothing in the kitchen that she doesn't manage to get into it, except her pum.

Before the job is through. There's garlic and tomatoes and string beans and sausages.

And sauerkraut and cottage cheese, Sauerkraut and corned beef hash, Blackberry jam and fruited eggs.

Blue points and castile soap, Dill pickles and asparagus.

And when you get to eatin' it. There's nothing in this realm.

That it resembles quite as much. As chavin' slippery elm.

They say that it's a Dago dish. But I will bet a hat.

That there's no Dago in this world. Who'd dare to tackle that.

It is the greatest mystery. That has ever met.

That asphalt pavement she turns out.

When Maggie cooks spaghetti.

New York Notes.

I have discovered the following sign on Forty-Second-street:

DINNER SERVED ALL DAY FOR 65 CENTS

As soon as I can accumulate the 65 I am going in there and eat all day. I may be reduced to the necessity of buying a blind man's sign and a tin cup. I met one of those genuine imitation blind men on Fifth avenue today. I tried to give him a quarter, but he looked at it and declined to take it because it was Canadian money. He said he had seen me before in Chicago, where I tried to work the same trick on him. He stepped over to the corner and woke up a policeman and tried to have me pinched. You have certainly got to have a stand-in to be able to help anybody in this city.

When I got off the Jersey City ferry they were just excavating for a new skyscraper. I went up to One Hundred and Forty-eighth street to take dinner with a friend and when I got back down town the building was completed, had changed ownership three times and a man had already committed suicide by jumping from the fifty-seventh floor. At one time during the day it had been the tallest building in the world for about fifteen minutes, when another building ten stories taller rose by its side. This one is expected to be the tallest building in the world until tomorrow morning at least. This information is given me by proud New York men.

Elevators make tri-weekly trips to the top of some of the tallest skyscrapers. I met a man who says he takes a trip to the top of the Metropolitan Life building every year on business just as he takes a trip to Europe every year. When persons depart upon one of these long trips their wives and children come to the elevator with them to see them off and kiss them goodbye.

The poet sang of the "mellow fall" with its "garden haze" and the "wildwood's call," of the warmth that thrills like the rare old wine and the glorious, gorgeous soft sunshine. And while he wrote the weather changed, becoming bilious and deranged. He shook and said: "I'm stung this trip," and he went to bed with a case of grip. They filed him up with pills and dope and the doctor said: "Cheer—up, there's hope." He's out again, but his friends all note that he wears felt boots and a woolly coat. He has sworn an oath that no more he'll write of the "mellow fall" and the "sunshine bright" in a land where Boreas has the call when the almanac says it's early fall. And most of us folks, like the luckless bard, have figured on fall by the usual card; but alas and alack, we are suffering much from chills and shivers and snuffles and such which leads us to say, dejected, well, you can't most always sometimes tell when it's summer, it ain't. When it's fall, the same. Now who in thunder is to blame?

Immodesty. Speak not of Africa's coral strand, And heather bellies who wear G strings and nothing more. Speak not of torrid Sulu land, Where women wear just glad smiles and walk the shore. Speak not of darkest Timbuctoo; One string of beads is ample dress and right in style. Just look what our women do—The X-ray skirt has got the heathen beat a mile.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

A HARD THING TO DO.

ONCE upon a time an artist and a short story writer were discussing a short story which had appeared in one of the last month's magazines.

Said the short story writer, "What bully illustrations! I wish I could get the man who illustrates my work to do something like that. And the story is so punk that it's scarcely worth printing. That's just some people's luck."

Said the artist, "Well I'm glad you like those illustrations. I call them rotten. No technique and no imagination. But I like the story. Thought it was one of the best I had read in a dog's age."

Queer, isn't it, how much easier it is to forgive merit and success in any line but our own? I know a pretty girl who is always talking about how clever and how talented this or that feminine friend is. Indeed she is so generously ready to concede all such virtues to her friends that she has the reputation of having a singularly sweet disposition. But try to make her admit that any given girl is pretty and you will certainly find yourself up against it. Not that she will be disagreeable about it. No indeed! She is far too canny for that. She will probably take particular care to profess her liking for the beauty candidate, but she will most regretfully point out to you some perfectly good reason why the latter just misses being pretty.

On the other hand, I know a clever newspaper woman, with no pretense to prettiness, who is always enthusing about some pretty girl she has met. But if you can make her admit that one of her sisters in the profession is a clever newspaper woman I will give you a five dollar gold piece.

And so it runs. The swimmer willingly admires the good tennis player, but he is likely to depreciate the performance of the best of swimmers. The musician is most generous in his admiration of the artist or writer, but a brother musician, especially in his own particular line, must be wonderful indeed to grudgingly concede any virtue or ability under the sun to her sisters, but she must continue to wonder why they dress with so little taste.

You remind me that there are some people big enough to be above such pettinesses. Yes I know that's true, and I'm glad to be reminded of it. Sometimes when one sees too many of the other kind of people one forgets.

There are such fine people, and I sincerely hope you and I belong to that class. And yet I suspect that even we occasionally slip over into the other type.

OYSTER DISHES SEASONABLE

Dr. Carl L. Alsberg, head of the bureau of chemistry of the United States department of agriculture, has praised the modern methods of growing oysters in deep water, where the beds are constantly swept by pure currents of salt water, and with the careful modern methods of transportation can be received at inland cities as fresh as when taken from the sea.

The same is true of crabs, which are hard and soft shelled. They make their home in the deep waters off the rocky coast of Korea, and are large and meaty and sweet and juicy, but come canned to us, or those off the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, particularly in Mobile Bay.

The oysters are extremely delicious when milk or cream is added. The crab, like the lobster, causes less gastric disturbance when served with no milk and very little cream. There are many delicious dishes made from both the oyster raw, with snappy relish of catsup, lemon and horseradish; soups, stews, fried, broiled and many of the more fancy dishes.

The crab also is served as deviled crabs, scalloped crab meat, crab omelet, baked potato with crab meat, crabs a la Newber, crabs a la Hollandaise and numerous other ways. Oysters should never be cooked. I mean by that they should only be subjected to heat until they are thoroughly heated through and "plump."

Panned Oysters. Put into a hot spider or pan with large surface twenty-five oysters of the best variety. Shake the pan and as soon as they are hot and plump add salt, pepper and butter. Serve at once on toast dipped in hot milk or cream, or two tablespoonsful of cream may be added before serving and then turn on to hot buttered toast.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I live in a small town where there are but few chances for a girl to get more than $5 a week for work.

(1) I am going to business college this winter and in the spring I wish to go to a big city to work. Can I secure a position without having references (except my college diploma)?

(2) Is there an employment agency in the city to which I could write to secure a position?

(3) Can I take a civil service examination in bookkeeping?

(4) What wages would an inexperienced lady bookkeeper expect?

GRAY EYES.

(1) Your diploma from the college would vouch for your ability as a student. If the college has a reputation for sending out good graduates help it would tend toward getting you a position. But you would not be able to command much salary, as you will be considered inexperienced in real business.

(2) There are always plenty of employment agencies in every city. Be careful that you select a reputable

one. Advise with the business college concerning this.

(3) I suppose so, if you are able to comply with the rules.

(4) Wages are different in different cities. If an employer could not get very much. Consult the director of your college.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two girls, thirteen, and are going with a couple of fine boys of fifteen. (1) Do you see any harm in going with them, if we follow our parents' advice?

(2) Is there any harm in going to the theater with them?

(3) Should we accept other invitations from boys?

(4) How often should they call? "TWO CHUMS."

(1) I see no harm in having boy friends, but by "friends" I do not mean beaux, or indulging in hugging and kissing and "puppy love."

(2) I do not like young girls and young boys should go to the theater except in the company of some older member of the family.

(3) Boys of fifteen are usually not able to invite girls to anything more than an ice cream soda, for they haven't the money to pay for theaters and such amusements. Therefore I don't think it good taste for young girls to accept invitations from young boys unless it is to some game or party that does not mean spending money.

(4) As often as they are welcome to your parents.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Kindly tell which is proper, for a woman to take a man's arm or a man to take the woman's arm when walking on a street. I am very much annoyed by a man who persists in taking my arm upon the street, as I think it improper. I fear to offend him by asking him not to. What shall I do?

"TROUBLED ONE."

It is very bad form for a man to take a woman's arm on the street, unless it is after dark and she needs assistance in crossing a street or something of that sort. A woman no longer takes a man's arm when she walks with him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: As I have been invited to a thirty-fifth wedding anniversary, I am puzzled as to what kind of a present is suitable.

There seems to be no particular gift for the thirty-fifth anniversary. Perhaps gifts will not be accepted simply your presence and congratulations. You may, of course, present your hostess with flowers.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Saltines lightly buttered and sprinkled with grated cheese and a little cayenne pepper, then browned in the oven are delicious with salad.

Instead of adding bluing to water in which lace has been rinsed, try making the final rinsing in milk. It gives a lovely creamy tone to the lace.

A nice sauce for croquettes may be made by adding to a cup of drawn butter, just before serving, a quarter of a cupful of diced cucumber and one teaspoonful of chopped parsley.

To sharpen scissors, put a pin between the blades and rub it up and down, working the blades as in cutting. This will put a new edge on the scissors.

THE TABLE

Celery Soup—Three stalks of celery, three cups of milk, one slice of onion, three tablespoonsful of butter, three tablespoonsful of flour, salt and pepper, one cup of cream.

Chestnut Croquettes—One cup of mashed French chestnuts, two tablespoonsful of thick cream, yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-quarter teaspoonful of vanilla. Mix the ingredients in order given. Shape into balls and dip in crumbs, egg, and then into crumbs again, fry in deep fat and drain.

Fatal Mixing of Labels. Mixing of labels had a fatal result at Paris, a few days ago. An eight-months-old child was taken ill, and the doctor who was called in gave the mother a couple of prescriptions, one for a potion to be taken internally, and the other for a lotion for external application. The chemist who made them up, however, put the position label on the bottle of lotion, and the label "To be applied externally" he affixed to the other bottle. The result was that the child died the following day.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

By FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

"Just to be good, to keep life pure from degrading elements, to make it constantly helpful in its own drawing, those who are touched by it, to keep one's spirit always sweet and avoid all manner of petty anger and irritability—that is an idea as noble as it is difficult."

"Just to be good," what food for thought lies in that little line. To be good, means—surely—to do one's duty as they find it before them; cheerfully, willingly, uncomplainingly.

We all want to do great things. My yes! We are sure we could. Of that we are certain. Trouble is, great things are not lying around loose waiting for some kindly disposed, fame-seeking individual.

The small tasks of life flank us on every side, awaiting accomplishment. Opportunity, masked in some simple task lies at our very hand, yet in our blind rush for the great things we pass it by.

If we could keep in mind that the really splendid things in life are not of the mushroom growth, that it takes time and persistent effort to accomplish the worth-while deeds, that the one who rises by sheer strength of will and by tending faithfully to details is the one who when they get up, stay up.

The man who isn't afraid to be ready to start to work when the whistle blows (not two minutes after) who doesn't think he'd die of heart failure if he stayed in minutes after closing time to see to a bit of unfinished work is the man who will be steadily—readily—advanced; the man you will find at the head of the pay-roll.

The man who has worked his way into a business, one who has put his time and money into one usually smart enough to know, when a man is doing a good day's work, or when he is simply soldiering and is quick to recognize, and advance a man of this type.

One of the troubles with our working men is that they do not take into consideration that their chance of advancement lies with themselves. The owners of business concerns are always on the lookout for dependable men; men that can be relied on to go ahead.

To work for the interest of the firm is not being a "sucker"; it is wisdom, for steady, efficient men are in great demand.

Don't be afraid you will work too hard; be as eager to earn your dollar as you are to draw it. Sign not for great tasks to do; just do the small tasks better.

Tell yourself you're going on! It may take time, but as Rome was not built in a day, don't be discouraged; until you say the race is over you are still in the game.

Never take a step backward; what you win—KEEP. Keep your mind to be successful and then stick and work. Who of us admires a quitter?

No matter how many failures you have, don't give up, for out of many failures comes success. The success that endures.

We all want to do great things! Then let us do cheerfully, willingly.

She Knew It All Along.

"My dear," said Mr. Bickers to his wife, "I saw in the papers today a decision of a Virginia court that the wife may, in some cases, be the head of the family." "John Henry," replied Mrs. Bickers, "the courts are sometimes very slow in finding out things!"

Ladies—Quick! Get Your Snow-Mellow

Never Again Shall Making A Cake Cost You the High Price of Eggs!

Read How to Make This Most Wonderful Cake In the World!

YOU may be a good cake-maker, but wait till you see your first cake filled with Snow-Mellow's delicious filling, or iced with Snow-Mellow's cold water or boiled icing! Wait till you see your first Snow-Mellow meringue pie! Snow-Mellow on pie—Oh, Goody! This Snow-Mellow is going to revolutionize the work and expense of dessert making for you. For less than four pennies' worth of Snow-Mellow makes the filling for your cake—or the toppings for two of your pies.

Save Those Eggs!

Save the expense of eggs, the exasperation of the eggs that refuse to beat properly, the fillings that squash and fall, the icings that get hard and brittle, the meringues that grow tough.

Snow-Mellow makes the most delicious icings, or a rich, thick, tender filling—for your layer cakes without eggs and without cooking.

So as you do not need any whites of eggs for your Snow-Mellow filling or Snow-Mellow icing—you don't want to break several eggs to get the yolks for making the cake layers. Save the eggs! Make cake layers by this recipe—using only one egg for the whole cake.

Put one egg, yolk and white into a cup. Half fill cup with melted butter. Then fill to top with milk. Mix thoroughly. Put into mixing bowl, 1 cup sugar, 1½ cups flour, 1 heaping teaspoonful baking powder.

Now mix wet and dry ingredients together and beat three minutes. Add a little vanilla for flavoring.

This makes two layers. After baking your cake-layers make your Snow-Mellow icing or filling—using no eggs—according to the plain, simple directions which come inside every package of Snow-Mellow.

Just think of it! A sumptuous cake, made with only one egg for the cake layers—and just one tablespoonful of Snow-Mellow, costing four cents, makes the icing or filling, half-inch thick—rich, snowy, delicious—for this big two-layer cake.

Clip out this cake recipe right now. Then get your package of Snow-Mellow quick! Your grocer has Snow-Mellow waiting for you—or he can get Snow-Mellow for you the very same day you ask him for it. Go to your grocer today for your package of Snow-Mellow!

Delightful Desserts

Oh, how we wish we could tell you in words all the wonders of Snow-Mellow! It's a snowy, fluffy, delicious "goody" that lends itself to all the arts of the housewife in making her dinners and luncheons delightful. There isn't any one kind of Snow-Mellow dessert—for when you have Snow-Mellow, you will find dessert making so easy and pleasant that you will make not only the various desserts described in the Snow-Mellow recipes, which come in each package, but you will make many new desserts that your fancy creates.

The big package of Snow-Mellow, guaranteed under the Pure Food Law, contains enough to make seven liberal family-size desserts or fillings for seven two-layer cakes—and costs only 25c—less than four cents for each delicious dessert or for each whole cake filling.

Use Snow-Mellow first as a topping for Pie or a filling for Layer Cake. One tablespoonful of Snow-Mellow—costing only four cents—goes as far as five eggs, which would cost you 12c to 20c. And Snow-Mellow is good—oh, so wonderfully tasty and satisfying. All of you—"from baby to grandmother"—will just "love" Snow-Mellow!

At All Grocers'

Instead of putting only enough Snow-Mellow for one dessert in a package and charging ten cents—we put seven times that quantity—enough for seven delicious two-layer cakes, and instead of charging you seventy cents, the price is only 25c—because we save you the cost of packing and delivering the six extra packages. That is the only fair way. For after you once find how easy to make and how good to eat Snow-Mellow is—you will want to serve it in different desserts several times every week.

Go to your grocer today and get Snow-Mellow, or telephone him for Snow-Mellow right now. There is no other treat you can give your family that will please them like Snow-Mellow. So good! So inexpensive! Seven big, rich, delicious desserts—and each one may be served a different way—for only 25c—less than four cents each!

All grocers and delicatessen stores can supply you with Snow-Mellow. If your grocer has not yet received his supply of Snow-Mellow, tell him you want Snow-Mellow and tell him to get Snow-Mellow for you from his wholesaler this very day. Get your package of Snow-Mellow and have a Snow-Mellow dessert—a Snow-Mellow pie or a Snow-Mellow cake—for your family tomorrow.

So, now, go today, madam, to your grocer and get for your family this exquisite, wonderful Snow-Mellow.

The sublime porte is the official name of the court of the sultan of Turkey. Montasem, the last of the Abbasside caliphs, fixed at the threshold of the principal entrance to his palace at Bagdad a piece of the black stone adored at Mecca, and thus the entrance became the "porte" by eminence, and the title of his court. The sultans, successors of the caliphs, assumed the title.

MRS. W. W. LAKE

Tells Others How to Get Strong and Well.

Mrs. W. W. Lake of Aberdeen, Miss., says: "The grippe had left me in a weak, run-down condition from which I suffered for some time. I tried different remedies but nothing seemed to do me any good until I took Vinol, from which I received great benefit. My cough is almost entirely gone and I am strong and well again, and I am glad to recommend Vinol to others who suffer as I did."

Mrs. Lake's recovery was due to the combined action of the medicinal elements extracted from cod's livers—combined with the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron, which are contained in Vinol, and her cough disappeared as a natural result that Vinol will do all we claim and will pay back your money if Vinol does not satisfy you. Stopped Night Sweats and Banished Cough

If you are suffering with a continued cough, cold or lung trouble which does not yield to any treatment, it might be the greatest value to you to investigate what Eekman's Alternative, a medicine for the throat and lungs, has accomplished for many similar sufferers. Many who have investigated and used it have voluntarily declared that it was the means of saving their lives. Read this case: "Gentlemen: For four years I was troubled with a cough, which gradually became worse. At night I would wake up with a cough, and I was losing my appetite. I had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease lung trouble. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Fair-Game Hospital. They also continued my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My neighbor would allow me to go until I had tried Eekman's Alternative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks I had marked relief. My cough ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, I felt better, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now, and have been for twelve years."

(Signed) MRS. MARY WASSON, Care Ed. Green, 1722 S. 17th St., Phila. (Above abbreviated; more on request.) Eekman's Alternative has been proved by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stomach Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries, and write to Eekman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for evidence. For sale by all leading druggists.

HOLTON of THE NAVY

A Story of the Freeing of Cuba

By LAWRENCE PERRY

Author of "Dan Merrithew," "Prison of Chauvin," etc.

Top "Church," or "Innocent," exclaimed Holton, recalling now that he had seen that broad-shouldered young doctor on many a hard-fought gridiron.

"The same," was the smiling reply.

"Well, Bob Church, I owe you one," rejoined Holton. "I used to try to emulate your deeds on the eleven at Annapolis, but I don't think I ever succeeded."

"Oh, yes, you did!" exclaimed the surgeon.

"Holton—Holton—Tommy Holton—I place you now. I think they put something like All-America after your name, a degree they never conferred upon me."

Holton blushed, and then, thanking his benefactor, once more he passed on down the trail, in company with two privates, wounded in the legs.

As Holton wandered down a line of tents, he ran into Aldridge, Buxton and Fisher, all of the flagship New York. He fairly flung himself into their arms, and overjoyed at seeing them for themselves not only, but because of the opportunity it gave him of getting the information he had obtained through to Admiral Sampson.

After lunching with his friends as guests of the junior officers of the Third cavalry, Holton made his way to General Shafter's headquarters.

The general was sleeping and could not be awakened, but Holton retailed his information concerning the spy to Lieutenant Milley, who, received it with great politeness and apparent gratitude, but obviously with little faith either in the fealty or the efficacy of the Cubans—a state of mind that Holton found prevalent among most of the officers of the army.

The army had been ordered to move to El Paso, or rather in the direction of El Paso, and there was much to engage Holton's interest.

The trail leading into the jungle was congested with light artillery, ambulance wagons and marching men.

Holton's present idea was to wait for the army to move, purposing to follow their advance, and under cover of the battle to enter Santiago. But as day after day passed it seemed to him as though the order to advance would be given.

He went up to the Cuban camp several times, and on one of these occasions had a long conference with Garcia, to whom still maintaining his role as an English newspaper correspondent, he related the details of his misadventures at Aserradero. Garcia's face clouded as Holton proceeded, and at the conclusion of his narrative he regarded the young officer sadly.

"I do not doubt what you say, Mr. Ogilvie," he sighed gloomily, "but it is a hard blow. Jose Cennola is—as one of our most trusted leaders. Now that I know, I can attribute many misfortunes to him, for he was very much in our confidence. Very well! Friends, comrades, have deserted us, have proved traitorous before this—I shall bear him in mind."

Six days in all elapsed before any indication that the army was to move came to the surface. On the sixth day, June 30, however, orderly aides began galloping down the road, and the word came that the advance was to begin at four o'clock that afternoon. Holton wondered if the entire army was to move at once or whether each command was to take up the march at an appointed hour.

At four promptly his question was answered when the entire force broke camp and crowded into the narrow jungle trail at practically the same minute.

Holton followed along the trail with an infantry regiment. The army was now marching into the wooded valley which bordered the high grass leading to and up San Juan hill, with the smaller rise, Kettle Hill, on one side.

As the day waned the men who knew that on the morrow would come the supreme test, settled down for the night with grim faces.

Midnight passed. Men stirred restlessly in their blankets. And in the faced men in blue drill uniforms called on the Virgin—and waited. Morning broke, silent and fog laden. An orderly galloped up to General Summer, head of the cavalry division, and presenting General Shafter's compliments, told him to move his division to the edge of the woods.

"What shall I do when I get there?" asked Summer.

"Await further orders," was the reply.

Holton strolled up to El Paso and found the regulars and the Rough Riders resting on their arms. Grimes' men were training their guns on San Juan, and impatiently awaiting the word to open fire.

It seemed ages to Holton before the order came, but come it did at last. The men of the batteries sprang tensely into position, and as a sharp order broke the silence, a lean-faced man jerked his arm sideways. A line of thick, red flame leaped out of the long, thin muzzle, a bellying cloud of yellowish-white smoke rolled and tumbled and made the air murky. Another gun belched forth its projectile, and soon all the guns were thundering with well-ordered precision.

The men were all crouched now, waiting for orders. Over their heads the terrible hum of the Mauser balls was incessant. Showers of leaves and branches fell among them. Every few seconds, it seemed, someone would tumble to the ground and lie motionless or else writhe in silent pain. Captain Mills was close by Holton's side when a ball struck that officer in the side of the head, back of the eyes, and passed clean through. Holton could even hear the sound the bullet made as it struck the skull, a dull impact, a thud like the clack of two sticks.

Holton bent over him and then left him for dead.

Crouching close to the ground he made his way along the lines, determined to find a place where he could tion had been affected by magic, he was among Hawkins' infantrymen on the slope of San Juan—lying down and firing, then going forward in a crouching rush, just as he saw the men around him doing. Once, lying down, he looked behind and on either side and marveled that the long, thin blue line of charging men was not wiped out utterly. There seemed so few of them.

Here and there he saw advancing groups, and then again one man, yelling and firing all by himself. The bullets poured upon them pitilessly. Men were falling on all sides.

As he veered along the slope of the hill a young regular officer passed him unconcernedly snapping pictures of the charge and yelling for his men to come on. He smiled at Holton, and Holton smiled back.

Then with a yell the onrushing soldiers came to their first rifle-pit. A few dead Spanish soldiers lay in it, but otherwise it was unoccupied. Into the long trench poured the men, firing a few volleys at the trenches above and then leaping out and piling on top of the hill.

Half-way up Holton saw a man with the shoulder-straps of a colonel, a fine-appearing fellow, with side whiskers. He had turned to speak to Shafter's aide, Lieutenant Miley, who had just come up with the men of the Third cavalry.

"How are you, colonel?" smiled Miley.

"How—?" Colonel Hamilton said no more, for a bullet entered his open mouth and bade him hold his peace for evermore.

And now the men began pouring up to the top of the hill, lying behind the crest and discharging bullets at the Spaniards who were fleeing down the other side, making helter-skelter for their entrenchments toward Santiago.

Those who reached there, and not all did, joined a heavy force of Spaniards lying there and turned their fire upon the hill they had so recently left. Thus a hail of lead flew upon and over the heights which the soldiers had taken, compelling the regulars, Rough Riders, and the white and negro cavalrymen, who had rushed over from Kettle Hill, to flatten themselves in the pits which had been prepared by the enemy.

To Holton, as he lay huddled in a trench with a Rough Rider on one side of him and a dead Spaniard on the other, it seemed as though the immolation of the entire army must follow an attempt upon the entrenchments before the objective point of the campaign was attained, and yet such an attack was what he had counted upon, as it would have enabled him, had he escaped the leaden storm, to make his way into Santiago.

Cervera had threatened, in event of the success of the American land campaign, to turn his guns upon the city, and as long as his vessels were in their present position, they constituted a menace to the army that certainly presented prospects of the latter's ultimate success in rather a doubtful light. And until the forts guarding the harbor were invested from the land side, a naval attack would prove too hazardous to undertake.

Over toward El Caney the thunder of cannon and the racking of small arms showed that Lewton and Chaffee were not having the easy time in taking the place that had been expected.

He Cut Across From the Foot of Kettle Hill.

see something. He had viewed as much of this visitation of sightless death in these dense woods as he could stand.

Half-crawling, he suddenly came upon the Rough Riders in a fever of rage. Summer had been ordered by Shafter to await orders here at the edge of the woods, but where were the orders? How long were they to be delayed? An hour from now there would be no Americans to receive orders.

To Holton it appeared as though the army had been deserted, left to its fate when suddenly word came from Lieutenant Miley, representing General Shafter, who was ill, for Summer's division to move at once on Kettle Hill, lying to the east of San Juan and somewhat nearer the trails from which the soldiers were to enter upon their attack.

Instantly from out of that fringe of woods and into the open, roofed with a torrent of lead, sprang the negro regulars and the Rough Riders, bawling their famous "yip yip" at the top of their lungs, while from a clump of trees near the San Juan ford Parker's little battery of galling guns rattled incessantly. To the left, out of the woods, dowed regiment after regiment of white regulars, with that gallant soldier, Gen. Hamilton Hawkins, at their head, making for the block-house on San Juan hill.

Holton, drawn irresistibly by the spirit of the conflict had seized a carbine from a dead soldier, and in his excitement he cut across from the foot of Kettle Hill and found himself first on the edge of the small lake lying between Kettle Hill and San Juan

Indeed Holton could see that it must be determined whether San Juan itself was to be held. All the men were now in the pits on the hill, discharging their weapons from cover, and keeping as close to mother earth as they could nestle.

The situation, as it appeared to the navy man, was a curious one. The men had taken the hill, but what were they going to do with it? They could not go back and they could not go forward. Their position was surely an anomalous one.

A fine lot of siege artillery, as Holton saw it, would solve the situation, and, indeed, as he thought this, a battery, red guidons flying and men cheering, came rolling and swaying up the hill.

Quickly unlimbering, the men aimed hastily, and sent a volley of projectiles flying into Santiago. But the huge yellow clouds had no sooner arisen and the reports had not died away, than it seemed as if the fire of the entire Spanish force was concentrated on that row of guns on the hilltop. Shells screamed, bullets whined, artillerymen fell one after the other.

Thus many minutes did not elapse before the gunners went rattling away down the hill much faster than they had come up. The effect of this on the minds of the men, hanging on the hill as though by their teeth, was not at all reassuring.

Dinner Stories

The young couple on the settee had been engaged only a week. He had kissed her fully forty times that evening. When he stooped she looked at him reproachfully, and the tears came into her eyes as she said: "Dearest, you have ceased to love me."

"No, I haven't," he replied, "but I must breathe."

The story is recalled of Sir Leopold McClintock, the Arctic explorer, who at the time was giving an account of his experiences amid the ice fields.

"We certainly would have traveled farther," he explained, "had not our dogs given out at a critical time."

But, exclaimed the young woman who had been listening intently, "I thought that the Eskimo dogs were perfectly tireless creatures."

Sir Leopold's face wore a whimsical gloomy expression as he replied: "I—or—speak in a culinary sense, miss."

With a smile on his rubicund features, the hotel manager was peacefully enjoying forty winks. Business was booming; the place was full.

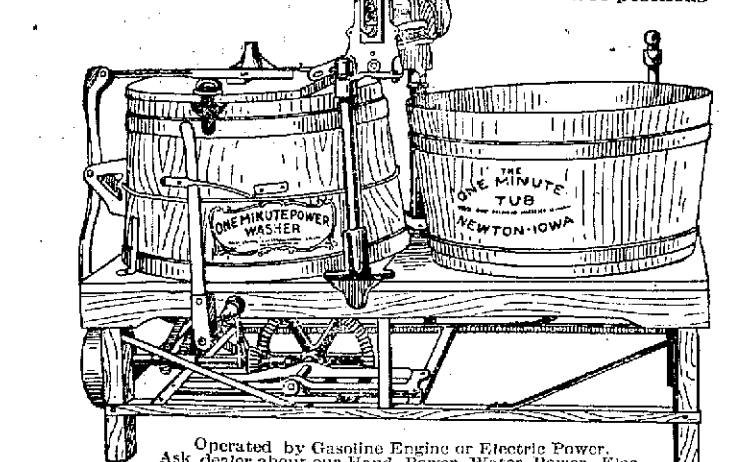

Knock on the door of his sanctum, however, brought him back to earth.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

Suffered Three Years. Used Resinol. Now Not A Pimple To Be Seen.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 27, 1912. "I had been troubled for the past three years with pimples which completely covered my face and neck. The pimples would come out, fester up and cause me to pick at them, feeling very uncomfortable. I tried most all kinds of facial creams, but with no effect. I tried a sample of Resinol Soap and Ointment and noticed instant relief. I bought Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and began the treatment. After using two jars of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, there was not a pimple to be seen, and now my face is as smooth as if there was never a pimple on it." (Signed) Albert Greenburg, 4167 Frankford Ave.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for itching troubles, skin eruptions, dandruff, red, rough faces and hands, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Sold by all druggists, Resinol Soap, 25c., Ointment, 50c., and $1.00, but you can try them without cost—just write for liberal samples to Dept. 18-M, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

HALLOWE'EN-

A PAGAN FESTIVAL

"Pulling the Kale" Will He Be Crooked or Straight?

The Legend of Hallowe'en, and How and Why It Became the Night of Love Tests and Pumpkin Devils.

OLD superstitions die hard, and it will be a long time before the custom of celebrating Hallowe'en goes out of fashion. Just why we celebrate Hallowe'en—a pagan festival, is a mooted question, and the average answer is "Because our fathers did." During the last few years there has been a craze for peasants and any festival which requires people to dress in fancy costumes or go through curious ceremonies is sure to be popular, consequently Hallowe'en is likely to be celebrated this year with no little ceremony.

Picturesque Druid Festival.

Hallowe'en is the evening of the day which precedes what is known as All Saints' Day in the Christian calendar, but its customs seem to have little in common with the Church festival, for Hallowe'en was celebrated by the Druids.

This was long before the Christian faith was adopted among the untutored people of ancient Britain. October thirty-first was the harvest season, and the strange priests of the still-stranger Druidic religion built bon-fires on the hill tops in Britain, Ireland, and France in honor of the sun god. The Druids for leagues around gathered clad in snow white robes at the altar of stones on a hill. On the altar was an emblem of the luminary they worshiped together with the sacred fire which had been carefully kept alive during the past year. The white robed figures grouped themselves around it and at a given signal quenched the fire. During the proceeding the crowd maintained absolute silence. Then a new fire was kindled on the hill and the assembled multitude raised a mighty shout and from every eminence for miles around other fires blazed into view. The same night the fire was put out in every cabin and farmhouse only to be rekindled with embers from the sacred fire of the priests which was believed to protect the homestead from perils so long as it remained burning. The people, believed in fairies, goblins and witches, and it was on this night that the spell of the witch was potent, and to guard against the mischievous pranks of the elves people followed closely every rule laid down by the Druid priests. Hallowe'en kept by Country Folks in the Early Days of Christianity. As the Druidic faith faded before the advance of Christianity the pagan festival lost much of its pomp and former significance and assumed a different mode of celebration. So, on the night of October thirty-first the simple country folks of Ireland and Scotland added new superstitions to the day and all sorts of curious stories are told of the weird happenings of this night. As it falls on the eve of All Saints' Day many believed that the spirits were allowed to roam on this particular night and mingle with those of the living. In Protestant countries the vigil of All Saints' Day is no longer a religious observance or at any rate it is not so in Scotland, England or Germany. With the Latin races it is merely a religious vigil and around its observance clings few if any of those wild legends or superstitions that are so plentiful in Scandinavia, Scotland and Ireland. The nearest approach to solemnity and weirdness is the Venetian notte della morti or Night of All Dead, but the religious ceremonies attendant thereon take place not on the thirty-first of October but on the evening of All Souls' Day—that is the second day following. In Scotland and Ireland Hallowe'en has always been kept with great ceremony—in the former more in the east mid-country and lowlands than in the remote Highland district; in other words, the festival is celebrated more by the Scots proper than among the pure Celts. Legends of the Witches Orgies. In the sixth century Hallowe'en was sometimes known as Witches' Night or the Devil's Sunday, and an old Scotch legend tells of the frightful orgies on this particular night when the Devil is supposed to have charge of things. He assembled all the witches together, going to the revel the Hallowe'en fires built on the hills came to be looked upon as a charm against evil spirits and as late as the seventeenth century it was customary for the farmers to make the circuit of their fields with a lighted torch in hand to protect the land from harm during the year. A part of the ceremony, too, was the chanting or singing of a doggerel rhyme during the walk around the fields. It was claimed that on account of these supernatural beings roaming about on Hallowe'en night secrets of the future might be learned from them by certain things being done which accounts for some of the rather curious customs of Hallowe'en. Of course, nobody living in the present age has the slightest faith in these signs, yet on that night thousands of young people throughout the known world go through a number of silly antics in order to learn something of the looks and disposition of their future husbands or wives.

Pulling the Kale.

"Pulling the kale" is one of the oldest Hallowe'en tests and one that is highly amusing and popular at the present time—no Hallowe'en party being complete without this test. Of course, this is an impossible performance in the city as a kale patch is necessary, but it is one of the easiest things to do at a country party. The young woman who is to make the test is blindfolded and led to the edge of the kale patch. From this point she walks among the kale and finally stoops down and pulls up a plant by the root. If the stalk is straight her future husband will be tall and handsome, but if the kale is crooked her fate will be an ugly man with a bent back. If plenty of dirt adheres to the roots of the vegetable the husband will be wealthy, but if the kale comes up clean of the soil poverty will camp at the marriage feast and remain with the couple for the rest of their lives. If the heart of the kale is sweet the disposition of the future life partner of the kale puller will be kind and gentle, but should the kale heart be bitter to the taste so will be the temper of the sweetheart. Curious Love Tests. Nuts and apples play an important part in learning one's fate on this particular night. For instance, two hazel nuts are thrown on the hot coals by a maiden. She secretly gives the names of two of her lovers to the nuts. If one of the nuts bursts it is a sign that this lover will be unfaithful, but if it burns with a steady glow until it becomes ashes she is to understand that this lover is faithful. Sometimes it happens, but not often, that both nuts will burn steadily and then the maiden is sore perplexed. Another practice is to place two nuts together on the coals named for a pair of lovers. If the nuts crack and jump it tells of unfaithfulness and separation, while if the nuts burn together the youth and maiden, for which the nuts are named will marry. In Ireland the throwing of hot lead into a pan of cold water is one of the popular tests. The lead in cooling, of course, takes curious forms. For instance, anything coming near the shape of a horse would be taken as an omen that the young woman will marry a dragon, or a cavalierman; should it take the form of a ship the husband will surely be a sailor, or the form of a cow or a plow it is understood to indicate that she will wed a farmer. It requires an Irish imagination to form this lead into these shapes. Hallowe'en is really a festival of superstition, yet withal a delightful one, for it brings young people together for innocent amusement as well as being a never ending joy to the children who play at making pumpkin devils.

has made for itself such an enviable reputation that to elaborate on its merits, especially in this country, where it is so well and favorably known, is like carrying coals to Newcastle. One beauty about this organization is that it has been together for so many seasons that the members work in such harmony that it remains one of some perfect machine, so excellent that the talents of one fit into the other. Their performances are always a delight, moving along smoothly and serenely, without any of the hesitation and with those which remain, it is impossible which are changing their members constantly. The only things the Bessey show changes are its plays and its wardrobe. Mr. Bessey states himself that after many seasons of constant vigilance for a repertoire of plays which would thoroughly satisfy him, he at last feels that he has secured the set desired, but this was not accomplished until hundreds and hundreds of them—dramas, comedies, farces, melodramas and everything had been rehearsed and tried out; many were found wanting and were discarded, and with those which remain, it is indeed a survival of the fittest. Playing opposite Mr. Bessey will be the talented and beautiful Nell Paul, than whom there is no more popular leading woman in stock in the middle west. Their old friends will undoubtedly be glad to learn that they are still the talented company, and that Adelaide Melnotte also is still in Mr. Bessey's support. Prominent in accompanying bevy of players will be Irma Darle, Sammy Walden, Ira Herring, and a dozen other players of merit. From advance indications, the forthcoming engagement of the Jack Bessey Stock Co., which opens at the Myers theater Sunday in "The Reformer" will be the most successful he has ever played here.

"WITHIN THE LAW."

What should prove the best entertainment of the year in theatricals is the announcement that "Within the Law" will be presented at the Myers Theater, matinee and evening, on Saturday November 1. The play is the sensation of New York, Chicago and London. The American Play Co., producers of the play promises a very clever cast of players and a lavish scenic production when the play is presented here.

An eminent clergyman says slit skirts will never go in heaven. But it will not be heaven to woman unless they can dress as they please. Got His "Compliment." Apparently it is dangerous for the young clergyman to fish for compliments. There is a story of a reverend divine who once asked a sexton how he liked the sermon. "I didn't like it at all," candidly answered that worthy. "Why, pray?" inquired the preacher. "First, because you read it; secondly, because it was not a reading."

IDA TARBELL TALKS ON FOREST PROBLEM

Urges Need for Scientific Forestry and Comments Wisconsin Laws on the Matter. [SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Oct. 30.—"One of the most pitiable pictures in the world is seen going through the districts of the country that have been raided of their timber. In the greed to cut the big trees and to convert them into money the lumberman has left only the trail of desolation behind." This was the opinion given by Miss Ida M. Tarbell, who is spending a week in Wisconsin, investigating the state industrial system. She went to Milwaukee this morning to investigate some of the larger shops there. Miss Tarbell talked of a bill passed at the last session of the legislature that temporarily puts a stop to increasing the forestry reserve in this state. She declared that what the country needed was "scientific forestry."

"I believe in forest reserves, emphatically so," continued Miss Tarbell. "I believe in the complete regulation of all private forests also, with against fires and for patrolling. There should be the fullest regulation. Land should be taken by the state and properly reforested. Of course the owners of the land should be fairly compensated, but the reforestation must be pushed by the state. Private parties will never do this. They are only interested in converting the virgin forests into money."

"The destruction of the forests of the country for the larger trees is one of the most disastrous, barbarous, unthinking destruction of timber. In this destruction by men, the future had nothing to do with it; the state or country had nothing to do with it. The only thought was to get out this timber and make quick money by the barbarous system. The picture of some of the cut over districts of New York, Wisconsin and other states, that have been raided of their timber is horrible. What we need is scientific forestry." Miss Tarbell favorably commented the law passed by the last legislature which permits the state to pay a part of the local taxes, within the districts where state forestry lands are located.

BALAK AND BALAAM.

A great racial migration was in progress. The natural effect of it was to fill all neighboring nations with great apprehension. The alien clans were like a scourge. They were myriad in number, warlike in spirit, and thoroughly trained in arms. They had had victories enough to give them confidence. No lance could support them, and the original population of the land was driven out. Their entrance was of necessity the expulsion of the native races. One frightened king bethought him of a strange weapon—something brand new in the art and science of war. It consisted in a concentration of malevolent and hostile thought. He wanted every living soul of his nation—men, women, and children—to form a concert of evil-wishing against Israel. The irreversible psychological effect of this would be a subtle moral depression—a paralysis of the esprit de corps of the invaders. It would be noiseless and smokeless, but more deadly than a modern Gatling-gun. Success in this strange process depended upon the finding of one whose fame for true prophecy would give prestige to the scheme and whose magnetic influence would draw all into the proposed league of hate. So Balak turned to Balaam. He must be had at any price. Cost must not be counted when the very perpetuity of the dynasty was at stake. At most the scheme could never make as heavy a draft upon the treasury as the mobilizing of an army. Balaam's descent to hell makes a fine study in casuistry—well worth close attention. It is passing strange that one whose very art was to read the motives of others, and divine by this means whether their success would be genuine and permanent or not, should not be able to read his own heart, or at least be controlled in his action by what he read there. Balaam temporized and lost his soul. He could not withstand the flattery of having an imperial embassy waiting to receive him at his door. Pride was the first step. Cupidity was the second. He was dazzled by the glint of gold. All his rhetoric goes for naught. His fine speeches do not ring true. His tongue turns one thing, but at the very moment his heart is toying with the opposite. History does not afford a more striking commentary upon the familiar text about knowing one's duty and doing it not. Balaam did not even get the cheap reward of gold or kingly apparel, which perhaps he craved more, while the "soundless lash" of a violated conscience beat him with many stripes. He knew his duty, he did it not! How sad to trace each step from splendor to disgrace!

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

There is nothing occult or arbitrary here. No man can really curse another. Every man curses himself. He brings upon himself the pains and penalties of his own sins. The poetry of Balaam's day is the history of ours. The star he came out to see is the Star of Bethlehem! The spiritual scepter of Jesus is the phenomenon of the hour. The "pierced hands" have lifted the gates of the centuries off of their hinges. His spiritual dominion has become universal. It spreads from the river to the end of the earth. There is true psychology in deferring answer until after a night. Solutions of the most difficult problems often come the morning. What's in a name? There is a subtle, subtle power in one. Balaam signifies "conqueror." But he did not conquer! He was conquered! Literature does not afford a finer analysis of the causes of national decline than in Lord Byron's diagnosis of the fall of Greece. His exhortation to his subjects, but sold them out for his own pleasure. The native resentment was fired to such a degree that the king fled for his life. He could flee to his base, but not as to his vital inner being. He was told that 40,000 prayed against him three times a day. He felt that storm of hate beat in waves upon him. It blighted his revels and finally killed him.

The Brick Mason

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Slawash."

THE brick mason can be found wherever man is congregated together in towns and cities and is civilized enough to wear suspenders and a porous plaster. Five thousand years ago the brick-mason was a useful citizen and drove a roaring business. When the earth was still damp and new and the children of Israel had not yet escaped from Egypt, the brick mason was a power in the land and cursed exceedingly at the poor goods which the poor Israelites turned out after the straw supply was cut off. The brick mason has a simple trade. It consists of piling bricks on top of each other and sticking them together with mortar. Occasionally, also, he has to squint along the wall and see if it is true. This is the secret of his trade. It is all in the squint. Any citizen can pile brick, but very few are equipped with the proper variety of squint. Many a statesman is wise enough to run an entire nation and keep the national debt growing like a fungus on a damp stump. But if he were to attempt to erect a brick wall it would develop rickets, blind staggers and a list to port before it had up one story.

IF YOU ARE NERVOUS or worried or vexed at trifles, your vital forces are slowly but surely deteriorating. Scott's Emulsion overcomes nervousness better than anything else because its nourishing force enriches the blood and stimulates its flow to all the tissues and bathes the tiny nerve cells in the rich plasma by which they are nourished. Shun alcoholic substitutes that stimulate and stupefy. Take Scott's Emulsion for your nerves. Its nutritive power is the greatest help that nature affords.

The brick mason needs few tools. He works with a flat, wide trowel and a full set of extra strong fingers. With the fingers he grabs the brick and with the trowel he anoints it with mortar and slaps it into place. Whenever the sun is busy broiling the earth to a gentle brown and the fervid summer is sending the idle rich fleeing to the seashore, the brick mason can be found—prowled half-way between Heaven and elsewhere, laying superheated brick with steaming mortar, and acquiring a complexion that would make boiled lobster look pale. Life is full of toil for him and his only pleasure is to work so fast that he runs out of brick and gets a chance to yell in a hoarse, indignant voice at a hod carrier three floors below. The brick mason draws big wages, and often makes as much in a day as the patient section hand does in a week. But he is not a magnate, for all that. He is one of the few workmen who take a longer vacation without pay than the school teacher does. The brick mason has to spend the winter reading food books and paying bills. When we think how the mason must forego the pleasure of laying brick on the windward side of a 11-story building, with the thermometer below zero, it is hard to avoid dropping a tear over his sad lot.

CHICKEN THIEVES BALKED WHEN POLICE GIVE CHASE

Chicken thieves came near making a loot of a prize bunch of chickens last night on Randall avenue, but prompt work by the police department frightened the thieves away. A family that had resided on the corner of Ranger and Randall avenues, have recently moved and had left their chickens under padlock in the rear of the vacant house. Two men were seen sneaking around the yard with flash lights and William McGowan phoned the police of the fact. By the time that the patrol had arrived the would-be chicken thieves had disappeared and left the chickens in peace.

Good Bowels Are An Aid to Growth

Growing Children Need a Mild Laxative to Foster Regular Bowel Movement.

As a child grows older it requires more and more personal attention from the mother, and as the functions of the bowels are of the utmost importance to health, great attention should be paid to them.

Diet is of great importance, and the mother should watch the effect of certain foods. A food will constipate one and not another, and so we have a healthy food like eggs causing biliousness to thousands, and a wholesome fruit like bananas constipating many. It is also to be considered that the child is growing, and great changes are taking place in the young man or young woman. The system has not yet settled itself to its later routine.

A very valuable remedy at this stage, and one which every growing boy and girl should be given often or occasionally, according to the individual circumstances, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a laxative and tonic combined, so mild that it is given to little babies, and yet equally effective in the most robust constitution. At the first sign of a tendency to constipation give a small dose of Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and prompt action will follow in the morning. It not only acts on the stomach and bowels but its tonic properties build up and strengthen the system generally, which is an opinion shared by Mr. John Dey, of Bloomfield, N. J. He has a large family and at ages where the growth and development must be watched. Little Marie has thrived especially well on Dr.

MARIE DEY. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mr. Dey considers it the right laxative for young and old, and has found none better for young children. The use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will teach you to avoid cathartics, salts and pills as they are too harsh for the majority and their effect is only temporary. Syrup Pepsin brings permanent results and it can be conveniently obtained of any nearby druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded. Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.
